

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

THE ADVERTISEMENT OF THE AUTHOR.

"It is a general complaint of large grammars, that they are too diffuse; and of the small, that they are too abrupt and incomplete. The former are for the most part incumbered with arguments and far-fetched illustrations, displaying the learning of their authors, but perplexing rather than instructing the learner; while those which are called practical, appear short, more in consequence of omission than of condensation."

"I now place this little work before the Public, with the wish that most of those who study the German language may derive benefit from what originally was designed to assist only a few persons in private. The book, notwithstanding the smallness of its size, contains all which belongs to the province of grammar, and which a student may require, till he is able to peruse native grammarians. It is particularly hoped that the rules and tables concerning the genders and declensions will be quite sufficient to clear up this most difficult part of the language."

"The Dictionary of Prefixes and Affixes appended to the present publication will be found of much assistance, since an acquaintance with those particles, by means of which the German language is rendered so eminently copious, must greatly facilitate its study."

PREFATORY NOTICE OF THE EDITOR.

It is necessary to state, that in this grammar but a few chapters (particularly that on pronunciation) have been considerably changed, and, it is thought, slightly improved. The other alterations and additions refer to the editor's "Introduction to the Study of the German Language." The editor simply wishes to add that he has had an opportunity of testing practically the judicious manner in which the rules and tables concerning the genders and declensions have been prepared; and that he has also left unaltered the Dictionary of Prefixes and Affixes, since it has been found fully satisfactory in its original form.

Entered according to the Act of Congress, in the year 1832, by HOGAN & THOMPSON, in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

THE SOUNDS OF THE LANGUAGE.

§ 1. VOWELS AND DIPHTHONGS.

A. Vowels.

THE vowels in German are either long or short; a distinction which determines the relative duration, but not the nature of the sound.

a—an intermediate sound between a in rather, and a in awe; it is long in Rath, advice;

short in Rand, margin.

ä—nearly like ai in hair; it is long in Väter, fathers;

short in Kälte, cold.

ē—nearly like a in hate; yet closer; it is long in Meer, sea;

short in messen, to measure.

The e after i in the same syllable merely protracts the sound of the i, as in Dieb, thief.

i—like e in wheel; it is long in wir, we;

short in Tisch, table.

o—like o in odor; it is long in loben, to praise;

short in Schloß, castle.

ø—like the French eu in peur, has no corresponding sound in English; it is long in Röhren, pipes;

short in Töpfe, pots.

u—like oo in boon, and u in full; it is long in Bruder, brother;

short in Wunde, wound.

ü, y—like the French u in vu; it has no corresponding sound in English it is long in Hüte, hats;

short in Hütte, cottage.

Observation. The doubling of vowels protracts the sound, as in Seele, soul

B. Diphthongs.

ei, (ey)—like i in mine; as in Schein, splendor.

ai, (ay)—more open than ei; ex. Kaiser, emperor.

oi, (oy)—as oi in hoist, alloy; it occurs only in proper names, as Beyer.

ui, (uy)—nearly as we; it very seldom occurs, ex. pfui! fy!

au—nearly as ou in house; ex. Maus, mouse.

eu—comes nearest to the sound of oi in noise; ex. Treue, faith.

§ 2. CONSONANTS.

A. Single Consonants.

1. Labials.

p—like p; ex. Priester, priest.

m—like m; ex. Lamm, lamb.

w—nearly like v; ex. Weinrebe, vine.

2. Labio-dentals.

f, v, ph—like f; ex. fett, fat.

ph is chiefly intended to represent the Greek φ.

v has the English sound of v in words of Latin origin, as November, November; in all genuine German words v and f have the same sound.

3. Palatals.

t—like t; ex. Taffe, Turk.

d—like d; as in did, thick; at the end of words like dt, as in rund, round.

n—like n; ex. nun, now—n becomes a nasal sound when followed by g or f; ex. lang, long.

4. Linguals.

r—like the Irish r; Rant, rank.

s—has not the sharp hissing sound of the English s, but approaches the English z; ex. Sonnenkreis, zodiac.

When used as addition to the s (ß) the z is never pronounced; it is sounded in some instances like ss, or a simple s.

sch—like sh; ex. Schüler, scholar.

The soft sound zh is heard only in words taken from the French language, as Genie, genius; Page, page.

ch—when it is preceded by ä, ö, ü, e, i, or a consonant, is a lingual formed in the fore part of the mouth and has no corresponding sound in English; ex. Fläche, plain; Pecht, pike; nichts, nothing. Its sound is like the Spanish x in xifero.

5. Gutturals.

k, q and sometimes c and ch—are pronounced like k; ex. Karoline, Caroline; Quäker, quaker; Christ, Christian; Credit, credit.

g—in the beginning of words, like g hard, as in Geist, ghost; at the end and sometimes in the midst of a word it has an intermediate sound between g hard, and the lingual ch in Pecht, pike; Schlag, blow; Wege, ways; at the close of a syllable it sounds like g in bringing; ex. bringen, to bring.

ch—when preceded by a, o or u, is formed in the throat and sounded like j in the Spanish word oveja; or like the ch in the Scotch word Loch; ex. doch, yet.

h—like h, when it begins a syllable, as in hoch, high; after a vowel, in the midst or at the end of a syllable it is not sounded, and merely protracts the sound of the preceding vowel, as in Meer, moor; it is entirely lost after t and r; ex. That, deed.

B. Compound Consonants.

x, fs, or ds, and sometimes chs—like ks; ex. Art, ax; ch is sounded like r, when the s belonged originally to the same syllable, as in Flachs, flax; but when the final s is added by a change of termination, as in das Fach, the shelf, genitive, des Faches, of the shelf, the original sound of ch is preserved.

z, ts, and sometimes c and t—are pronounced like ts; as Zahl, number; diesseits, on this side.

C, is pronounced like j (ts), when it precedes e, i, ä, ö, ü, y; ex. Cäsar, Cæsar.

ſ is commonly pronounced like z, in words of Latin origin, when the t is followed by i and another vowel; ex. Ration, ration.

kn—both letters are sounded; as in Knien, knee.

gn—both letters are sounded; as in Begnabigung, pardon.

pf—the three letters are sounded; as in Pflug, plow.

schw—the two sounds, sch, and w, Schwindeln, swindle.

Observation. The doubling of Consonants makes the sound stronger; as in Retter, savior.

GENERAL RULES.

1. Each letter is pronounced in every word, each sound is constantly represented by the same letter, and each letter has only one sound. A few exceptions have been mentioned in the former sections.

2. The accent almost always falls on the root syllable.

3. Syllables, whenever it is possible, begin with a consonant, which in derivatives is often, for this purpose, taken from the root, and thereby sometimes changes its pronunciation: thus, Brot, loaf, pronounced Brot, becomes in the plural Brote, the d resuming its soft sound.

ON THE SUBSTANTIVE.

The Substantives are Primitive, Derivative, or Compound.

1. The primitive nouns are almost all of one syllable.

2. The derivative nouns are formed, either from primitives, or from other parts of speech, and generally terminate in syllables now never used by themselves; such as e, el, heit, feit, schaft, &c.

3. The compound substantives are formed by the union of one or more simple nouns, or by the PREFIXING of other parts of speech to simple or compound nouns; the gender being, with a few exceptions, determined by the last substantive in the word: thus Water, is Masc. and Haus Neut., and das Waterhaus the paternal house, neut., and der Hausvater father of a family, masc.

4. The syllable inn added to the names of many male animals, and male appellations, makes them feminine; as der Löwe, the lion, die Löwin, the lioness. Those ending with mann generally make Männinn; as Hauptmann, captain, Hauptmänninn, captain's lady.

5. To make a noun diminutive, the syllables chen, lein, or el are added; of which chen is the most usual; Ex. Söhnchen. 369.

¶ In most instances the nouns thus made feminine or diminutive, change the a, o, u, au, into ä, ö, ü, äu if they have these vowels in their roots.

ON THE GENDER OF SUBSTANTIVES.

6. The substantives have three genders, viz. masculine, feminine, and neuter.

7. The gender may be known by the nature of the word, by its termination, or by practice.

MASCULINE.

I.—The proper names of men.

II.—The names of male animals, if the sexes have distinguishing appellations; otherwise the male is called das Männchen, or männliche Thier.

III.—Appellative nouns relating to men, gods, angels, &c., except the following compound words: die Schildwache, die Mannsperson, das Mannsbild; and also das Gespenst.

IV.—The names of winds.

V.—The names of seasons, months, and days; except die Jahrzeit, das Jahr, die Mittwoche (also der Mittwoch).

VI.—Many roots of verbs, as der Haß, from hassen, to hate.

VII.—The generic names of many birds, fish, and quadrupeds, not ending in e.

¶ Der Affe, Haie, Löwe, Däse, and Kabe, are masculine.

VIII. The names of most rivers, not in Germany.

FEMININE.

I. The proper names of women.

II.—The names of female animals, when there is a distinguishing appellation for the sex; otherwise the female is called das Weibchen, or weibliche Thier.

III.—Appellative nouns relating to women, goddesses, &c., exc. Weib, Frauenzimmer, Weibsbild, Weibstuch, Mensch, (wench), Mädchen, and Fräulein, which are neuter.

IV.—The names of many geographical and natural objects, particularly those ending in e, el, er.

V.—Many names of rivers.

VI.—Abstract nouns, with the terminations ei, heit, keit, schaft, ung; and names of qualities derived from adjectives, as Größe, greatness, from groß.

VII.—Derivatives from verbs, mostly in t, and te, as die Furth, the ford, die Fahrt, the ride.

NEUTER.

I.—The young of animals, as das Junge, das Kind.

II.—All words not originally substantives, as das Blau, the blue, das Ich, the I, i. e. the self, das Reden, the speaking. Also qualities considered in their whole extension, as das Große, the great, i. e. whatever is great.

III.—Most of the collective or reiterative terms, especially when they begin with ge, or end in sel, das Volk, das Gebirge.

IV.—All diminutives.—See rule V. "On the Substantive."

V.—The names of metals, exc. die Platina, der Stahl, der Zink, der Zinn, and others of modern discovery.

VI.—The names of the letters of the alphabet.

VII.—The names of countries and provinces; except die Mark, die Lausitz, Lusatia, die Pfalz, the Palatinate, die Meisdau, and others in au, die Krimm, Crimea, die Türkei, and others in ei; and those formed of words of a different gender; as der Hunderüd.

VIII.—The names of almost all cities, towns and villages, even in compositions of which the last word is of a different gender; as das heitere Darmstadt, though Stadt be feminine; except der Haag, the Hague, and a few in Burg, which are feminine, and in Stein, which are masculine.

DECLENSION OF SUBSTANTIVES.

GENERAL RULES.

12. Nouns femin. always remain unaltered in the singular.
13. Nouns mascul. always form their genitive sing. in s, es, n, or en.
14. Nouns neut. form theirs in s, or es.
15. When the gen. sing. ends in s, the dat. and acc. remain unaltered; if in es, the dative generally takes e; if in n, or en, the other cases, sing. as well as plur., except the nom., take the same ending.
16. In the plural, the femin. nouns Mutter and Tochter receive no addition, others take e, n or en; Masc. and Neut. nouns, either take no addition, or e, n, en or er.
17. If the nom. plur. end in n, all the other cases plur. are the same; if in any other letter, the gen. and acc. are like it, and the dative receives an additional n.
18. Many nouns which do not form their plur. in n, change in this number the vowels a, o, u, au, of the sing. into ä, ö, ü, äu.
19. Names of countries, and provinces, &c. take the gen. in s, or es; and remain unchanged in the other cases.
20. Names of persons remain unaltered when preceded by the article, and take (according to their termination) s, ns, or ens in the genitive, and n or en, in the dative and accusative; the plural, if the name ends in e, is made in n, if it ends in any other letter, it is made in e; and if in el, en, er, it remains unaltered. (See rule 30.)

Plural	N. G. A.	die, der —	Mütter	—	die Mütter
	D.	den — n	— n	—	— n

- This declension includes most Masc. and all Neut. nouns ending in el, en, em, er; all diminutives in chen and lein; Neut. beginning with ge, and ending with e; and the Fem. Mutter and Tochter, in the plural Mütter, Töchter.

The following change their vowels in the plural.—MASCULINE:

In el: Apfel, Hammel, Handel, Mangel, Mantel, Nabel, Nagel, Sattel, Schnabel, Vogel.

In en: Boden, Bogen, Garten, and perhaps a few more.

In er: Ader, Bruder, Hammer, Klaffer, Schwager, Vater.—NEUTER, Kloster.

Der Buchstaben, (also Buchstabe-s, IV. and Buchstabe-n, V;) Balzen, Frieden, Funken, Gedanken, Gefallen, Glauben, Haufen, Namen, Samen, Schaden, Schatten, Schlitten, Schreden, (also Schred-es II.) belong to this declension, although occasionally used in the nom. sing. without n.

DECLENSION II.

30. EXAMPLES OF THE DECLENSION OF NAMES OF PERSONS.

N.	Pomer	Capphe	Kant	Schulz	Diana	Ötthe
G.	—s	—s	—s	—es, ens	—ens	—ns
D. and A.	—n	—n	—en	—en	—en	—n
N. G. A.	—	—n or s	—e	—e	—en	—n, ns
D.	—n	—n, 's	—en	—en	—en	—n

Christus, Jesus, Johannes, and a few others retain the Latin declension; and various Latin and Greek names lose the terminations es, ius, or us, and are declined after one of the above examples, but most frequently take their plural in s, as do most foreign names. (See rule 20.)

DECLENSION OF PRONOUNS, ARTICLES AND ADJECTIVES.

LIST OF WORDS BELONGING TO EACH DECLENSION.

35. (I.) Personal Pronouns.

36. (II.) Der, the, that, which.—The genitives and the dat. plur. between () are used only as pronouns.

Wer, who—refers to persons; was, what—to things.

¶ This declension is derived from the third person of the preceding pronoun.

37. (III.) Adjectives and pronouns (the personal excepted) not preceded by the article.

Alle-er-e-es, all Ander-er-e-es, other Dies-er-e-es, this Einig-er-e-es, some Erst-er-e-es, first and other numbers Gut-er-e-es, good and all other adjectives

Jed-er-e-es } each Jedwed-er-e-es } every Jedlich-er-e-es }
Jen-er-e-es, that Manch-er-e-es, many Selb(ig)-er-e-es, same Selb-er-e-es, such Welch-er-e-es, who, which

Ein (er)-e-(es), a, one Kein (er)-e-(es), no, none
Mein (er)-e-(es), my, mine
Dein (er)-e-(es), thy, thine Sein (er)-e-(es), his, its Ihr (er)-e-(es), her, hers, their, theirs, your, yours
Unser (er)-e-(es), our, ours
Euer (er)-e-(es), your, yours

The words of this column drop the er of the nom. masc. and the es of the nom. and acc. neut. when they are placed before substantives, and retain them when they are used absolutely; as ein Stod, a stick; hier ist einer, here is one.

Jemand } declined after the masc. sing. only, and occasionally unde-Niemand } clined in the two last cases.

38. Adjectives of this declension change s of the genitive into n, when the substantive makes this case in s; and if there are several adjectives in the genitive or dative masculine or neuter, or in the genitive or dative feminine or the genitive plural, the first only takes s, m, or r, and the others n, gutes, alten, rothen Weines, of good, old, red wine.

39. (IV.) Adjectives and Pronouns preceded by the Article or a word with the article terminations of III.

Der gute , the good, and all other adjectives	Der ihr (ig)e, hers, theirs, yours
— jenige , that, he, she, &c.	— unser (ig)e, ours
— mein (ig)e, mine	— euer (ig)e, yours
— dein (ig)e, thine	— selb (ig)e, the same
— sein (ig)e, his, its	— erste , the first.

40. When Adjectives are preceded by a word of the second column of declension III., a Personal Pronoun, viel, much, wenig, little, mehr, more, they take in addition, in the nominative masculine and the nominative and accusative the r and s placed between (); as ein guter Mann, a good man.

Jedermann, every one (the same in the dative and accusative) makes the genitive Jedermannes.

The following are undeclinable :—

41. Man, one, some one, people, (the French on) Selbst, self, or same, after pron. ich selbst, I myself, mir selbst, to myself, like the French même for emphasis.
Selbst, such, before ein ; selbst ein, such a.
Was für, { what sort of, what ; often followed by ein(er) &c.
Welch, {
Wo, compounded with prepositions, for welch or was ; as woran, whereon, &c.
Da, compounded with prepositions, for dies, &c., as datan, thereon.

THE COMPARATIVE AND SUPERLATIVE.

43. The COMPARATIVE, if the adjective end in e, is expressed by the addition of r ; and of er, if it end in any other letter.

44. The SUPERLATIVE, if the adj. end in e, is expressed by st, and if it end otherwise, mostly by est, as—

Weise, wise ; weiser, wiser ; weisest, wisest.

Süß, sweet ; süßer, sweeter ; süßest, sweetest.

45. To these two rules there are but VERY FEW exceptions generally depending on euphony, when the comparative is made by mehr, more, and the superlative by meist, or am meisten, most.

46. Adjectives in the comparative and superlative moreover change a, e, u, into ä, ö, ü, as roth, *röth*er, *röth*est, except those with au ; those ending in haft and sam, those derived from verbs, as participles, or having the form of such ; besides—

Blau	platt	laß	platt	sanft	stolz
bunt	hehl	leß	plump	satt	straff
fahl	fahl	lese	roh	schlaff	stumpf
falsch	fang	matt	rund	schlant	tell
froh	knapp	morsch	sacht	starr	voll
gerade	lahm	nacht

47. Adjectives remain undeclined in every degree, when they are used as the complement to the nominative, der Wein ist alt, or älter, the wine is old, into ä, ö, ü, as roth, *röth*er, *röth*est, except those with au ; those ending in haft and sam, those derived from verbs, as participles, or having the form of such ; besides—

Der alte, or ein alter Wein
Der ältere, or ein älterer Wein
Der älteste, or mein ältester Wein.

48. Adjectives ending in et, en, er, generally lose the e when another e is added.

49. The following form their degrees irregularly :—

Gut, good ; besser, better ; best, best Viel, much ; mehr, more ; meist, most Hoch, high ; höher, higher ; höchst, highest Nah, near ; näher, nearer ; nächst, next.

50. Sometimes the sup. degree is used in an adverbial form, in the dative with am, (an dem) prefixed to it ; as am besten, am meisten, &c.

52. Ein varies before substantives like the indef. art.; eins is used in counting without reference to an object.

53. Zwei and drei make in the gen. zweiter and dritter, and in the dat. zweiten and dritten, if not preceded by an article or pron.

54. Other numbers take en in the dative when they are not followed by a substantive.

55. The Units are always placed before the Tens.

56. The Ordinals (except erste, dritte, achte, which are irregular) are formed by the addition of t, to neunzehnte inclusive; and by st from zwanzigste upwards; they are considered as adjectives, and are here presented with the termination e, as in the nom. sing. of declension III, since they are mostly used with the def. art.: der, die, das erste; des, der ersten, den ersten &c.; erste, erstes, &c. ein zweiter.

57. FRACTIONAL NUMBERS are formed by the addition of l to the Ordinals das Drittel, $\frac{1}{3}$; das Zwanzigstel, $\frac{1}{20}$; drei Hundertstel, $\frac{3}{100}$.

58. DISTINCTIVES are made as follows:—erstlich, erstens, or zum ersten, firstly; zweitens or zum zweiten, or zum andern, secondly; drittens, or zum dritten, thirdly; viertens, or zum vierten, fourthly, &c.

59. PARTITIVES are, zwei und zwei, drei und drei, two and two, three and three; je eins, je zwei, je drei, one, two, three at a time, or every one, two, or three, &c.

60. In speaking of halves the word halb is joined to the ORDINAL form of the NEXT number to that mentioned in English; as anderthalb $1\frac{1}{2}$, for zweites halb; dritthalb $2\frac{1}{2}$; vierthalb, $3\frac{1}{2}$, &c. a month and a half, anderthalb Monate; four years and a half ago, vor fünftehalb Jahren.

61. In speaking of the hour, halb is placed BEFORE the next number, which in this case is CARDINAL, as half past one, halb zwei; half past two, halb drei.

62. To denote repetition, Mahl or Mal is used: ein Mahl or einmal, once; zwei Mahl or zweimal, twice; vielmahl, many times, &c.

63. To denote variety, the cardinal number takes the termination erlei (the gen. before the old subst. fem. lei or sen) as einerlei, of one sort; zweierlei, of two sorts, &c.; dreierlei Bänder, three sorts of ribbon, &c.

64. Fach or fältig are joined to express the English FOLD, as einfach, einfältig, simple; zweifach, zweifältig, double or twofold, &c.

65. Numeral Substantives are, die Ein, die Zwei, drei Sehnen, &c.; in card-playing; die Hälfte, the half; das Paar, the pair; das Duzend, the dozen; die Mandel, the fifteen; das Schock, the score (also threescore); das Hundert, the hundred; das Tausend, the thousand; die Million, the million.

69. The FUTURE TENSES are formed by means of the PRESENT of werden, prefixed to an infinitive, as—

Ich werde haben, seyn, werden, loben, I shall (or will) have, be, become, ankleiden.

Ich werde gehabt haben, gewesen I shall have had, been, become, seyn, geworden seyn, gelobt haben, praised, dressed. angekleidet haben.

70. The CONDITIONAL TENSES are formed in the same manner, by means of the perfect Subjunctive of werden, as—

Ich würde haben, seyn, werden, loben, anfleiden. I should (or would) have, be, become, praise, dressed.

Ich würde gehabt haben, gewesen seyn, geworden seyn, gelobt haben, angefleidet haben. I should have had, been, become, praised, dress.

71. The PRETERITE TENSES of all transitive verbs, and of many of the intransitive, are formed with haben, as—

Gehabt, gelobt, angefleidet haben, To have had, praised, dressed.

Ich habe gehabt, gelobt, angefleidet, I have (or may have) had, praised, dressed.

Ich hatte (or hätte) gehabt, gelobt, angefleidet. I had (or might have) had, praised, dressed.

72. Several of the intransitive, or neuter, form them with seyn, as—

Gewesen, geworden seyn. To have been, become.

Ich bin (or sey) gewesen, geworden. I have (or may have) been, become.

Ich war (or wäre) gewesen, geworden. I had (or might have) been, become.

73. There are not much above two hundred simple irregular verbs. Those not enumerated in the list, are conjugated like loben or anfleiden.

74. The second pers. sing. of the imperative, without the softening e, which is often omitted in the familiar style, is the naked root of the verb. This e may be left out wherever it is placed between (), if the meeting of the consonants produce no harshness or indistinctness; even in the infinitive when the root ends in el, e, eh, or er, the e is mostly omitted; früen pron. frü-en, lächeln, sichern, sehn, or sehen. Sometimes the e before the l or r is dropped, when these consonants are followed by e, as ich lächle, for lächele.

75. The imperative which is taken from the subj. pres. takes always the pronoun AFTER the verb, except du and ih, which may be omitted (see haben.)

COMPOUND VERBS.

76. The Compound verbs are of two kinds, separable and inseparable.

77. The SEPARABLE, unless they be irregular, are conjugated like anfleiden; but whether regular or not, the particle is placed as in the example; and if moved behind the verb, takes all the words governed by the verb between: Ich fleide jeden Morgen meinen Bruder an, I dress my brother every morning.

78. When the infinitive of any of these verbs requires zu (a prep. corresponding with the English to and the French à and de,) it is placed between the particle and the verb; thus, anzufleiden.

79. The INSEPARABLE are conjugated like simple verbs, except that they do not take ge in the participle past; which is also omitted in verbs ending in iren.

80. The following are the inseparable particles:—

be	as bearbeiten	to labor	Part. past bearbeitet
emp	empfehlen	recommend	empfohlen
ent	entbehren	dispense with	entbehrt
er	ergründen	fathom	ergründet
ge	gefährden	endanger	gefährdet
offen	offenbaren	reveal	offenbart

per	as	vermissen	to	miss	Part. past	vermisst
verab	—	verabreden	—	concert	—	verabredet
vernach	—	vernachlässigen	—	neglect	—	vernachlässigt
verun	—	verunehren	—	dishonor	—	verunehrt wider	—	widerstreben	—	resist	—	widerstrebt
zer	—	zerstören	—	destroy	—	zerstört

81. Miss, in transitive verbs, although inseparable, mostly takes ge in the participle, which in intransitive verbs, it frequently does not. A few, such as missarten, take ge of the participle and zu of the infinitive between the participle and the verb.

82. Durch, über, um, unter, voll, are inseparable when the verb governs a case, and separable when it does not; and as a general rule, the verb is separable when the accent falls on the particle, and the reverse, when it does not.

83. Most of those compounded with substs. adjs. or advs. are separable. Some (among which are also those compounded with ut) are inseparable, but take ge in the participle, as—

erfolten	to	exult	gefroloft
handhaben	—	handle	gehandhabet
frühftücken	—	breakfast	gefrühftüdt
liebäugeln	—	ogle	geliebäugelt

84. All particles used in compound verbs, not mentioned, are separable.

PASSIVE VOICE.

85. The Passive Voice in German is formed by the verb werden; as—

Gelobt werden, to be praised.	Ich wurde gelobt, I was praised.
Gelobt* werden feyn, to have been praised.	Ich würde gelobt, I might be praised.
Ich werde gelobt, I am or may be praised.	Ich bin gelobt werden, I have been praised, &c.

Note, A. If any part of werden is followed by an adjective, or stands by itself, it means to become, grow (to come gradually into being); if followed by the dative, it means to be bestowed on. (Dem Menschen ward der Verstand, understanding was given to man); if followed by a participle past, it means to be; if by an infinitive, shall or will, should or would.

Note, B. As the English student often finds it difficult to decide whether the verb to be before a participle should be translated by feyn or werden, i. e. whether the verb be passive or neuter, the following should be observed:—

The passive voice may be made active by the nom. of the former being turned into the acc. of the latter, and the person or thing by whom or which the action is stated to be performed being made the nom. of the active verb: thus—I am loved; by some one being understood, we may say, some one loves me.

* In the passive voice werden is preferred to gewerden.

REFLECTIVE VERBS.

86. There are many verbs in German which require a second pronoun relating to the nom. or which are, what is commonly called reflective, but are not so in English. They are pointed out in all dictionaries, sich being joined to the infinitive as their characteristic.

They are conjugated as follows :—

Sich ankleiden, to dress oneself.	Sich angekleidet haben, to have dressed oneself.
Ich kleide mich an, I dress myself.	Wir kleiden uns an, we dress ourselves.
Du kleidest dich an, thou &c.	Ihr kleidet euch an, you, &c.
Er, sie, es kleidet sich an, he, she, it, &c.	Sie kleiden sich an, they, &c.
Ich kleidete mich an, I dressed, might have dressed myself.
Ich habe (hatte, hätte) mich angekleidet, I have, (had, might have) dressed myself.
Ich werde (würde) mich ankleiden, I shall, (should) dress myself.
Ich werde (würde) mich angekleidet haben, I shall (should) have dressed myself.
Kleide (du) dich an, dress thyself.	Kleiden wir uns an, let us dress ourselves.
Kleide er sich an; let him dress himself.	Kleidet (ihr) euch an, dress yourselves.
Kleide sie sich an, let her dress herself.	Kleiden sie sich an, let them dress themselves.
Ich freue mich, I rejoice.	Ich habe mich gefreut, I have rejoiced.
Du brütest dich, thou boastest.	Er hat sich gebrüht, he has boasted.

NEUTER OR INTRANSITIVE VERBS.

87. When a verb does not admit of an acc., it is called neuter or intransit. The conjugation of these verbs is the same as that of the active, except that some form their compound tenses with seyn, which in English make them with to have.

88. Those which denote an action or continuous state, or a motion with out a reference to its direction, take haben: Ich habe gearbeitet, geblutet, gelegen, gereist, I have worked, bled, lain, travelled. More particularly verbs denoting sound, bellen, to bark; those denoting the completion of an action, particularly those with the prefix aus: ausblühen, to have finished blossoming; the reciprocal and impersonal sich müde laufen, to run oneself tired; es hat geschneit, it has snowed.

89. Those which indicate more of a passive state, a transition, or a motion in a particular direction: Ich bin eingeschlossen, gewachsen, genesen, nachgeieilt, I am shut up, grown, recovered, I have hastened after.

90. The following are invariably conjugated with seyn :—

Abarten , & others with the pref.	bekommen	Erblaffen , and others with	gerathen
Ab1	bersten	Er 7	gerinnen
Anbrennen , and others with An2	beschimmeln	Fallen	geschehen

WITH seyn OR haben.

91. The following are formed with haben when the sense is of an active kind, and with seyn, when more passive; and sometimes with the one or the other indifferently:—

Abblühen	Arten	Eilen	Springen
— schlagen	Beharren	Glücken	springen
— wecken	— schimmeln	Landen	stossen
Anschlagen	Dringen	Nachsehen	Verzagen.
— stoßen

92. Those having the prefixes durch, über, um, take *seyn when the verbs are separable, and haben when inseparable. Wir sind zwei Stunden umgefahren, we have driven two hours round; Wir haben die Stadt umfahren, we have driven round the town.

* Exc. überlegen, übernachten, and umfragen, which always take haben.

93. When aus signifies out, the verbs to which it is joined take seyn; but when it means terminated, done, they take haben.

Das Wasser ist ausgedampft,	Es hat ausgedampft,
The water is evaporated.	It has ceased smoking.

Exc. Ausbauern,—harren,—hohlen,—hören,—rufen,—ruhen,—sehen,—stehen,—tragen, (in which the sense of termination is not absolutely evident,) always take haben.

94. When fort signifies FORWARD, the verb with which it is connected takes seyn; but in the sense of continuation, it requires haben:

Er ist fortgeeilt,	Wir haben fortgearbeitet,
He has hastened away.	We have worked on.

95. Nach connected with verbs of motion, in the sense of FOLLOWING, requires seyn; and haben in the sense of IMITATION.

Sie sind ihnen nachgereist,	Sie haben ihnen nachgereist,
They have travelled after them.	They have travelled in imitation of them.

96. The following take seyn when they are accompanied by words expressing the direction or ultimate aim of the motion, and answer to the questions wherefrom? whereto? how far? and haben, if the verb with its accompaniments answers to the questions when? how? how long?

Fahren	friesen	rücken	traben
flattern	laufen	rudern	träufeln
fließen	marschiren	schwimmen	triefen sinken	rauschen	segeln	trauen
hüpfen	reisen	springen	warten
sagen	reiten	stolpern	wandeln
klettern	rennen	straucheln	wandern
knien	rollen	taumeln

Sie haben geschwind gefahren,
They have driven fast.

Sie sind aufs Land gefahren,
The have taken a ride into the country.

Der Vogel hat geflattert,
The bird has fluttered.

Er ist zum Fenster hinaus geflattert,
It has fluttered out of the window.

97. The following take a different auxiliary according to their different signification. N. B. h stands for haben, s for seyn.

Angehen,	to concern, h.	bestehen,	to subsist, h.
—	begin, s.	—	consist, s.
Anziehen,	draw, pull, h.	Einschlagen,	pledge one's hand;
—	move, s.	—	(strike as lightning) h.
Aufsitzen,	— sit up, h.	—	— turn out, succeed, s.
—	get on horseback, s.	entstehen,	— fail, h.
Ausklagen,	kick (like a horse) h.	—	— arise, s.
—	put forth leaves, s.	Frieren,	— freeze, h.
Begegnen,	— treat, behave to, h.	—	— be frozen, s.
—	meet, s.	Iren,	— err, h.

Stren,	— go astray, f.	Schlagen,	— (with Wurzel) to take root; to warble, f.
Schlagen,	— strike (against any thing), grow up

98. All those not enumerated in the above list, take haben; which is also taken by those included in these lists when they are used actively.

IMPERSONAL VERBS.

99. These verbs are employed in the 3rd pers. sing. preceded by the pronoun es, it; as,

Es regnet, it rains.	Es hatte geregnet, it had rained.
Es regne, it may rain.	Es hätte geregnet, it rained, or might have rained.
Es regnete, it rained, or might rain.	Es wird regnen, it will rain.
Es hat geregnet, it has rained.	Es würde regnen, it would rain, &c.
Es habe geregnet, it may have rained.

100. Several verbs are impersonal in German which are not so in English; and many have for the English nom. a second pron. in the dat. or acc. as,

Es hungert mich, I am hungry.	Es fehlt mir, I want.
Es hungert dich, thou art hungry.	Es fehlt dir, thou wantest.
Es hungert ihn, (not sich) he is hungry.	Es fehlt ihm, he wants.
Es hungert sie, she is hungry.	Es fehlt ihr, she wants.
Es hungert uns, we are hungry.	Es fehlt uns, we want.
Es hungert euch, you are hungry.	Es fehlt euch, you want.
Es hungert sie, they are hungry.	Es fehlt ihnen, they want.

101. Sometimes es is omitted, and the second pronoun placed first; as—

Mich hungert. — Mir fehlt. — Mich hat gehungert, &c.

102. The third person of geben, to give, preceded by es, is used like the French il y a, both for singular and plural, and governs the acc.

Es giebt einen Gott, there is a God. Es giebt Bücher, there are books.

IRREGULAR VERBS.

103. Of the following list of Irregular Verbs, it is to be observed that :—

- I.—The participle present, the first pers. sing. (except of dürfen, können, mögen, müssen, seyn, sollen, wissen, wollen, and the plural of the Pres. Ind., the Pres. Subj. (except of seyn) and the third pers. sing. and the plural of the Imperat. are NEVER irregular.
- II.—The second and third person singular of the present indicative, and the second person singular of the imperative, are rarely so.
- III.—The participle past and the imperfect are always irregular.
- IV.—The Imp. Subj. is formed, with very few exceptions, from the Imp. Ind., thus: if the latter contain the vowels a, o, u, they are changed in the former into ä, ö, ü; and if the Imp. Ind. does not terminate in the singular in e, this letter must be added in the Imp. Subj. (see the auxiliaries haben, seyn, and werden.)

* Placed near the infinitive, denotes that the verb may also be conjugated regularly; if near a particular tense, it indicates that variation for that tense only.

§ Shows that the form near which it is placed, is used only in the elevated style.

THE ADVERB.

104. There is no general distinguishing termination for the adverb; and most words, therefore, denoting the circumstances and qualities of things, are both adverbs and adjectives; with this difference, that as adjectives, and when placed before subst. they are declined (see p. p. 17, 18,) and as adjs. connected with the subst. by means of a verb, they are invariable: dieſe ſchöne Frau iſt nicht nur ſchön, ſondern handelt auch ſchön, this handsome woman not only is handsome, but also acts handsomely.

105. There are some adverbs, such as gern, willingly, ſehr, very, vielleicht, perhaps, which can never be adjectives. Others can only become adjectives by an additional syllable: as from oft, frequently, öfter; heut, to-day, heutig; vorn, in front, vorder; hier, here, hieſig; da, there, daſig, &c.

106. Some substantives, and even adjectives, are made into adverbs by the addition of an s, by which they assume the form of a gen. absolute - thus from

Der Morgen, morning	Morgens, in the morning
Der Abend, evening	Abends, in the evening
Der Montag, Monday	Montags, on Mondays, &c.
Die Nacht, night	Nachts, at night
Die Mitternacht, the midnight	Mitternachts, at midnight
Die Seite, side	Dieſeits, on this side
	Jenſeits, on that side
	Meinerſeits, on my part, &c.
Der Fall, the fall	Ebenfalls, likewise
Daſ Mal, the time	Wielmals, frequently
Der Flug, the flight	Flugs, ſwiftly
Der ſtehende Fuß, the standing foot	Stehenden Fußes, inſtantly
Der Spornſtreich, the ſtroke of the ſpur	Spornſtreichs, in haſte
Der eilende Lauf, the ſwift courſe	Eilenden Laufes, rapidly
Bereit, ready	Bereits, already
Eilend, haſtening	Eilends, haſtily
Erſt, Erſten, firſt	Erſtens, firſtly

NOTE.—We alſo ſay, des Morgens, des Abends, (and although the ſubstn.

be fem.) des Nachts, des Mitternachts, &c. and with some must always join the art., as, Drei Mal des Jahrs, thrice a year.

107. The adverbs formed of the substs. of time, Morgen, Abend, &c. are used when we speak of repetition, and on the question how often? or what time? as, Ich sehe ihn gewöhnlich des Morgens, I see him usually in the morning; for on the question WHEN the substantive must be in the accusative. (See p. 47.)

108. Sometimes adverbs are formed by the subst. fem. Weise, manner, placed after, or even joined to the adj. or adv. in the gen. case: as from glücklich, happy, happily, glücklicher Weise (glücklichweise); but it is only used in a peculiar sense; e. gr.

Er ist glücklich angekommen, he is happily arrived (without mishap).

Er ist glücklicherweise angekommen, he is fortunately arrived (by good fortune).

109. Adverbs which express a quality, (and therefore are also used as adjectives) take the degrees of comparison, thus, schön, schöner, am schönsten, or aufs schönste.

110. The following are irregular:—

Bald, soon,	eher,	am ehesten.
Gern, willingly,	lieber,	am liebsten, the comp. and sup. of lieb, dear
Viel, much,	mehr,	am meisten, meisten.
Wenig, little,	minder,	am mindesten, also regular.
Besser, gut, well,	besser,	am besten, probably from the antiquated baß , well.

111. A few, as äußerst, extremely, höchst, highly, may be used absolutely without an or auf.

CONJUNCTIONS AND INTERJECTIONS.

112. These parts of speech are invariable, and properly do not belong to the province of grammar. For those which influence the position of the verb, see page 49.

PREPOSITIONS.

113. Prepositions govern the genitive, dative, or accusative, and some the genitive or dative, or dative or accusative.

114. PREPOSITIONS WITH THE GENITIVE.

Anstatt or Statt, instead	Außerhalb, on the outside*
An and Statt may be separated thus, An des Vaters Statt, instead of the Father.	Innerhalb, in the inner part*
Befolge, pursuant, according to	Obenhalb, on the upper side*
Halben, halber, on account	Unterhalb, on the lower side*
Halben is preferred when the substantive has an art. or pron.	Diesseits, on this side
—They are both placed after the noun: des Brodes halben, for the sake of Bread.	Jenseits, on the farther side
	Laut, according, conformably to Mittels, vermittelst, by means
	Um-willen, for the sake.—Always separated like an-statt

* These four prepositions are rather put in the dative when another genitive follows.

Um meinetwillen or wegen, for my sake

— deinetwegen, for thy sake, &c.

Um dessentwillen, deswegen, on account of that — weßentwillen, weßwegen, on account of which Ungeachtet (ohngeachtet), notwithstanding.—May be placed before or after its case and is sometimes found with the dative.

Unweit, not far from—Unweit der Stadt, not far from the town

Vermöge, by dint, power, or means Während, during Wegen, on account of, concerning. May be placed before or after the noun, but is most frequently before it.

Rangs, Zufolge, Nasser (see below.)

115.

WITH THE DATIVE.

Auß, out of Nasser, out of, on the outside, besides.

—In Nasser Landes, out of the country, it governs the gen.

Bei (see Rule 117.)

Entgegen, towards, contrary.—Is united with the verbs of motion, gehen, laufen, &c. to meet by going, running, &c.

Rangs, along.—Also with the gen.

Mit, with

Nach, after, behind, to, towards, following (in a direction) according to Nach, according, is placed after its case, der Beschreibung nach, according to the description; but if the subst. is followed by another, it goes before: nach der Beschreibung des Mannes.

Nebst, together with

Ob, over (rather obsolete)

Sammt, together with

Seit, since

Since, as an adverb, is rendered by seitdem: Seitdem er hier ist, since he has been here.

Von, of, from, by

Zu, to, at, on

Zufolge, in consequence of, in accordance with

Is always put after the dative case; it also governs the genitive and then is placed before its case.

Zu wider, contrary to Always after its case.

116.

WITH THE ACCUSATIVE.

Durch, through, by, (by means)

Placed after the substantive denotes duration: die Nacht durch, the night through Für, for Gegen, towards, against

Gen is an abbreviation of gegen, and used in a few particular phrases.

Ohne, without

Sender, without (not much in use)

Um, around, about, for, &c.

Wider, against, in opposition.

WITH THE DATIVE OR ACCUSATIVE.

These prepositions govern the dative, if the verb with which they are connected express a state or continued existence, or a motion within a place; and on the questions, where, whereat, wherein, whereon?

They govern the accusative if the verb denote a motion, or tendency from one place or thing to another; on the questions, whereto, to what direction or place?

DATIVE.

An, at, on, near, upon, in—

An einem Baume stehen, to stand near a tree.

ACCUSATIVE.

to, in, near; (bis an, as far as)

Sich an einen Baum stellen, to place oneself near a tree.

DATIVE.	ACCUSATIVE.
Auf, on, upon, in— Das Buch liegt auf dem Tisch, the book lies on the table.	On, upon, into Legen Sie es auf den Tisch, place it on the table.
Bei, close, near, beside— Er sitzt bei mir, he sits beside me.	Sie setzte sich bei mich, she seated herself beside me.
Hinter, behind— Er ging hinter ihm her, he was walking (along) behind him.	Er ging hinter ihn, he walked (stepped) behind him.
In, in— Wir waren im Garten, we were in the garden.	into und gingen ins Haus, and went into the house.
Neben, beside, next to— Die Flasche steht neben Ihnen, the bottle stands next to you.	Stellen Sie sie neben ihn, put it next to him.
Über, over, above— Er schlief über dem Lesen ein, he fell asleep over the reading.	over, concerning, across; (bis über, up to) Ich ritt über die Brücke, I rode over the bridge. — placed after, it expresses continuance: die Nacht über, during the night.
Unter, under, beneath, among— Er saß unter dem Thorwege, he sat beneath the gateway.	Er begab sich unter das Volk, he went among the people.
In Unter Weges, on the way, and unterdessen, in the mean time, it governs the genitive.
Vor, before— Er fiel vor ihm, he fled before him, (he following).	Er warf sich vor ihn hin, he threw himself down before him.
Zwischen, between Ihr Hut hängt zwischen zwei andern, Your hat hangs between two others.	Hängen Sie ihn zwischen beide, hang it between both.

118. Many of the Preps. may be joined to the adverbs da, wo, (with an r placed between when they begin with a vowel), and correspond with the English, wherein, therein, whereon, thereon, &c. (See rule 151.)

SYNTAX:

OR RULES ON THE USE, AGREEMENT, GOVERNMENT, AND SUCCESSION OF WORDS; OR ON THE FORMATION OF PHRASES.

119. Articles, Adjectives, and Pronouns agree with the subst. to which they are joined or refer, in gender, number and case.

THE ARTICLE.

120. The DEFIN. ART. in German serves to point out individuals as well as species:

Der Mann ist hier, the man is here
Die Männer sind hier, the men are here

Die Menschen find nicht alle gut, men are not all good Die Tugend ist liebenswürdig, virtue is amiable Der Wein ist theurer als das Bier, wine is dearer than beer Die heilige Schrift lehret, holy writ teaches Der heilige Johannes schrieb, St. John wrote.

121. It is also used—

- [a] Before names of countries of the fem. gender: die Schweiz.
- [b] Before names of countries of the neut. gender, when they are preceded by an adjective: das große London.
- [c] Before names of persons, if they be not declined; yet only in the nom. sing. when speaking familiarly: der Peter ist ein guter Bursche, Peter is a good fellow; des, dem, den, die Peter, &c.
- [d] When emphasis and distinction are required, although the subst. be of the same gender, &c.: der Hund und der Stier, the dog and the bull.
- [e] For the indef. art. when per might be substituted: ein Schilling die Flasche, a shilling a bottle; zwei Mal des Tages, twice a day.
- [f] In the following and similar phrases:—

In der Stadt, in town	Das verlorne Paradies, Paradise lost
In der Kirche, at church	Die beiden Kinder, both the children
In die Kirche, to church	Die halbe Stadt, half the town
Auf der Börse, on 'change	Der ganze Weg, all the way.

- [g] Before the absol. poss. prons., meine, meinige, &c. (See page 17.)
- [h] With the pers. pron. instead of the poss. pron. (see rule 145); and by itself, instead of the same pron. (see rule 155.)

122. The article is omitted.

- [a] When a subst. is taken in a partitive sense: hier ist Brod, here is Bread.

[b] When the subst. is used in an indefinite sense: Kinder und Narren sagen die Wahrheit, children and fools tell the truth.

[c] When some or any are placed before substs. to express limited numbers, or quantities, the former are indicated by einige: einige Männer, and the latter by etwas: etwas Brod.

[c] When the subst. stands after the gen. which it governs; Schiller's Werke, Schiller's works, for die Werke Schillers, or des Schiller.

[d] After it has once been expressed before a series of substs. of the same gen. num. and case; der Vater, Bruder und Better; (for an exc. see preceding rule, d.)

[e] Before names of towns and countries of the neut. gen. (see exc. preceding rule b.)

[f] Before names of persons, when declined, (comp. preceding rule, c.)

[g] Before titles of rank: Georg, König von England, George, King of England; König Georg.

[h] Before the titles of books, and other superscriptions: Deutsche Sprachlehre, German grammar; Erster Theil, vol. first; Inhalt, contents; Vorrede, preface.

[i] Before the name of God, as the Supreme Being.

[j] In a few words and phrases as the following: Ostindien, the East Indies; Westindien, the West Indies; ersterer, the former; letzterer, the latter; Besagter, Erwähnter, Gedachter, Genannter, the aforesaid; Folgender, the following; Beklagter, defendant; vor Augen, before one's eyes; in Händen, in one's hands; alle Welt, all the world.

[k] Before adjs. compared with one another, where je...je or je...deste are substituted: je eher, je besser, the sooner the better; je mehr man ihm zuredet, desto weniger hört er, the more one urges him, the less he attends.

123. The Indef. Art. is generally used as in English, exc.—

[a] In the phrases: eine halbe Stunde, half an hour; ein halbes Jahr, half a year.

[b] Before few, hundred, thousand, ein is not employed, if not taken in the sense of ONE.

124. CONTRACTIONS OF THE ARTICLES:—

am	for	an dem	im	for	in dem	aufs	for	auf das
beim	—	bei dem	zum	—	zu dem	durchs	—	durch das
hinterm	—	hinter dem	zur	—	zu der	fürs	—	für das
vom	—	von dem	ans	—	an das	ins	—	in das

SUBSTANTIVES.

125. If two subst. having a dependence on each other come together, one is placed in the gen.: die Gottesliebe, the love which man bears to God; die Liebe Gottes, the love which God bears to man.

126. To avoid ambiguity, von, zu, an, aus, vor or in are used instead of the gen.

[a] To express the MATERIAL of which a thing is made: ein Becher von Silber, a cup of silver; ein Tisch aus Marmor, a table of marble. For which may be said: ein silberner Becher, ein marmorneter Tisch. (See list of pref. and aff. en and ern.)

[b] To determine the BIRTH, COUNTRY, RANK, RELIGION, OR POSSESSION of property, lands, or TITLES of lands:—

Ein Russe von Geburt, a Russian by birth
 Ein Mann von altem Adel, a man of old nobility
 Ein Graf aus Paris, a Count from Paris
 Der Graf von Paris, the Count of Paris
 Von Religion ein Mahometaner, a Mahometan by religion
 Der König von Frankreich, the King of France
 Der Herzog von Norfolk, the Duke of Norfolk.

[c] To determine AGE, SIZE, WEIGHT, MEASURE, WORTH, OF CONTENTS.

Ein Kind von drei Monaten, an infant three months old Ein Thurm von 50 Fuß Höhe, a tower 50 feet high Ein Schiff von 1000 Tonnen, a ship of 1000 tons
 Eine Fregatte von 60 Kanonen, a frigate of 60 guns
 Ein Ochse von 40 Stein, an ox of 40 stones Ein Mann von Gelehrsamkeit, a man of learning
 — von Verdienst, von Ehre, a man of merit, of honor Schillers Lied von der Glöde, Schiller's song of the Bell.

[d] WHEN THE PARTS ARE SEPARATED FROM THE WHOLE:

Die Blüthen von dem Baume, the blossoms of the tree
 Ein Stück von dem Braten, a piece of the roast meat.

[e] To distinguish the author of a thing, or the object of a representation from its possessor :—

Klopstock's Virgil, the Virgil belonging to Klopstock
 Der Messias von Klopstock, the Messiah by Klopstock Ein Bildniß Raphaels, a picture in possession of Raphael Ein Bildniß von R., a picture by R.

[f] In phrases as the following :—

Die Soldaten in dieser Stadt, the soldiers (quartered) in this town ; distinguished from die Soldaten dieser Stadt, of (belonging to) this town.

Ein Lehrer an dieser Schule, a master (belonging) to this school
 For dieser Schule ; which would imply that he is the only master
 Der Herr vom Hause, the tenant of the house

Distinguished from Herr des Hauses, owner of the house

Die Liebe zu Gott, the love towards God

Die Furcht zu sterben, the fear of death

Aus Begierde anzuheufen, from a desire of accumulating .

Gewöhnung zur Arbeit, habit of labor

Abscheu vor dem Müßiggange, horror of idleness

Nacheiferung in Tugenden, emulation of virtues.

127. To, before nouns of relationship, &c. is rendered by the gen.

Ein Freund des Königs, a friend to (of) the King

128. Of, between substs. of MEASURE and QUANTITY and those of substance and individuals, often also after voll, full, is omitted :

Ein Glas Wasser, a glass of water

Ein Regiment Soldaten, a regiment of soldiers

Ein Schiff voll Matrosen, a ship full of sailors.

129. When the last word is preceded by an adjective or pronoun it is in the gen.—

Ein Glas guten oder gutes Wassers, a glass of good water

Ein Regiment dieser Soldaten, a regiment of these soldiers

130. Often voll takes the addition er for of, without reference to the gend. or numb. of the substs. : voller Lärm, full of noise

131. When several substs. are placed before one by which they are governed, the first only is put in the gen.—

Des Herzogs von York Andenken, the duke of York's memory.

132. The proper names are usually placed before their governing subst., when they are not preceded by an adj., and in this case the christian names or titles are undeclined :—

Kaiser Josephs Leben, the Emperor Joseph's life

Christian Friedrich von Kleists Gedichte, the poems of C. F. von Kleist

Doctor Martin Luthers Schriften, the writings of Dr. M. Luther.

133. If the name preceded by an adj. or title is placed AFTER the governing noun, it remains undeclined :—

Die Thaten des Königs Friedrich, the deeds of King Frederic Die Werke des berühmten Kant, the works of the famous Kant.

ADJECTIVES.

134. When adjs. relate to persons, the substs. Mann, Frau, &c. may be omitted, and when relating to persons or things, ONE by which they are followed in English, must be omitted :

Der Gute, the good (man)	Ein Guter, a good (man, one)
Die Gute, the good (woman)	Eine Gute, a good (woman, one)
Die Guten, the good (people, ones)	Gute, good (people, ones)
Der Bediente, the servant man	Ein Bedienter
Der Gesandte, the ambassador (sent man)	Ein Gesandter
Der Verwandte, the relation	Ein Verwandter, a relation (male)
Die Verwandte, ———	Eine Verwandte, a relation (female)
Die Verwandten, the relations (both genders)
Alle, all (persons)	Alles, all, every thing.

135. When they are used to express the abstract quality, they are declined in the neut. sing. without any subst.

Das Erhabene und Schöne, the sublime and beautiful Jede Sache hat ihr Gutes, there is some good in every thing.

136. Some, especially those of colors, are declined like substs. of the second declension when they signify a substance : Französisches Schwarz, French black ; die Güte des Berliner Blauen, the goodness of Prussian blue.

137. Ganz, halb, viel, wenig, are usually undeclined, if they are not preceded by an art. or pron. : Ganz Spanien, all Spain ; Halb Griechenland, half Greece ; viel Geld, much money ; wenig Papier, little paper ; but das ganze Land, all the country ; die halbe Provinz, half the province, &c.

138. Allerlei and allerhand are always undeclined : Allerlei Münzen, all sorts of coins.

139. In familiar conversation, adjs. are often left undeclined : schön Wetter, fine weather ; for schönes.

140. When two adjs. precede a subst., it is not uncommon to suppress the declension of the first ; ein schwarz- und weißer Hund, a black and white poodle.

PRONOUNS.

141. The PERSONAL PRONOUN in the nominative case governs the verb as in English ; and is not repeated if it governs several verbs in succession : Ich sah und hörte nichts, I saw and heard nothing.

142. The gen. is never used, except after certain verbs (see p. 45) : Erbarme dich meiner, have pity on me ; and in connection with numbers : Ihrer sechs, six of them. In other instances, or, before the pers. pron. is rendered by von : they speak of me, sie reden von mir.

143. In addressing people, the second pers. sing. is used between near relations, intimate friends, and to confidential servants ; the second pers. plur. to mankind in general, towards those who are addressed in the sing. by du, and to inferiors in the sing. as well as in the plural ; the third person sing. towards servants and inferiors : Peter, bring Er mir Wasser, Peter, bring me water ; Maria, hat Sie mein Feuer angezündet ? Mary, have you lighted my fire ? and the third person plural, in addressing superiors, or equals in a respectable rank of life : Ich habe Ihren Brief erhalten, I have received your letter. Towards very high personages, the third person plural is also used when we speak of them : Seine Majestät haben es gewollt, H. M. has wished it.

¶ For the sake of distinction, Er, Ihm, Ihn, Sein, Sie, Ihr, Ihnen, when used in addressing persons, are written and printed with a capital initial.

144. In formal language towards persons of very high rank, the expressions Hochdieselben, Höchstdieselben, Allerhöchstdieselben, are used for Sie, you.

145. The pers. pron. in the dat. with the def. art. is used instead of the possess. when speaking of any thing about the body of an individual : Er hat sich in den Finger geschnitten, he has cut his finger ; Ich habe mir das Bein zerbrochen, I have broken one of my legs ; Der Hund hat ihm den Rock zerissen, the dog has torn his coat.

146. Derfelbe, Dieselbe, &c. is used instead of er, sie, es, to avoid ambiguity : Der Offizier begegnete dem Unbekannten, und da derfelbe ihm nicht ausweichen wollte, u. s. w., the officer met the stranger, and as the same (i. e. the stranger) would not make way for him, &c.

147. This pron. is used also to avoid the repetition of similar words : kennen Sie dieselbe, for sie, do you know her.

148. Es frequently begins the sentence for the sake of emphasis, and then corresponds with THERE. Es befanden sich viele Leute da, there were many people there.

149. This pron. is also placed at the head of phrases expressing a wish : Es lebe der König ! may the king live ! Es thue jeder seine Pflicht, let each do his duty.

150. 's stands frequently for es : Sagen Sie's ihm, tell it him.

151. It is contrary to the genius of the language, to use es, and even the dat. neut. when relating to a thing, after a preposition ; and we say daran, darauf, daraus, dabei, &c. for an, auf es, or ihm, aus, bei ihm ; Ich schlug darauf, I struck on it ; Er befindet sich wohl dabei, he is well off with it.

N. B. The same prepositions are also joined to wo ; as woran, worauf, &c., and used instead of auf was or welches, &c. : Worauf verlassen Sie sich ? on what do you rely ?

152. The POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS are two-fold : conjunctive and absolute. The conjunctive are mein, meine, mein (second column, rule 37), and are always prefixed to substs. If placed before or after seyn, they are undeclined (see Rule 176).

153. The absolute are (1) Meiner, meine, meines, meine ; (2) der, die, das meine, die meinen ; (3) der, die, das meinige, die meinigen, mine, &c. (See rules 37 and 38.)

154. Of these the first is generally used after the verb seyn, in the sense of belonging to : das ist meiner, &c. ; the second in the familiar style and (singularly enough) in higher poetry ; and the third in polished conversation, &c.

155. Die Meinigen, Deinen, &c. also signifies those belonging to me, to thee, &c. as relations, servants, soldiers or adherents of any kind : das Meinige, Deinige, &c., my, thy property.

156. The conj. poss. pron. is supplied by the def. art. when there can be no doubt of the person : Ich werde es dem Vater sagen, I shall tell it my father ; Steden Sie es in die Tasche, put it in your pocket.

157. The RELATIVE PRONOUNS are (1) welcher, welche, welches, welche ; (2) wer, was ; (3) der, die, das. (See pp. 16 and 17.)

158. This pronoun governs the verb only in the third person ; therefore if the verb is to agree with the antecedent, whether of the first or second person, the antecedent must be repeated after the relative: du, der du alles weißt, thou who (thou) knowest every thing.

159. Der, die, das, &c. is substituted for welcher, for the sake of euphony and in phrases as the foregoing, this form is particularly preferred.

160. The genitive of der, being more distinct, is preferable to that of welcher: die Leute, deren Stolz ihn empörte, the people, whose pride revolted him.

161. Wer and was are used without an antecedent, the demonstr. to which they relate being often placed after them: wer es gesehen hat, (der) glaubt es, he who has seen it, believes it, instead of derjenige glaubt es, welcher, &c., or derjenige, welcher es gesehen hat, glaubt es.

162. The INTERROGATIVE PRON., besides welcher, wer and was, are also welch, welch ein, was für, and was für ein. (See pp. 16 & 17.)

163. Welcher, &c. is placed before substantives and in relation to them.

164. Wer and was are used when the gender and number of the objects of inquiry are unknown:—

Wer hat es gesagt? who has said it?

Wessen Pferde sind das? whose horses are these?

Wem gaben Sie es? to whom did you give it?

Wen wollen Sie sehen? whom do you want to see?

Was hat er geschrieben? what has he written?

165. Was für means what sort of, what, and is used for substances in the singular and for individuals in the plural. For individuals in the sing. we say, was für ein, or einer.

Was für Brod ist das? what bread is that?

Was für Pferde sind das? what horses are these?

Was für ein Buch lesen Sie? what book do you read?

Ein Französisches, a French one.

Was für eines? what sort of a 'one?

166. Was or welch ein and was für are used in exclamation:—was für, or welch ein Mann! was für Leute!

167. Welche is commonly used for some, instead of einige or deren. Ich habe welche, I have some.

167½. The DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS are (1) dieser, diese, dieses; (2) jener, jene; (3) derjenige; (4) selbe, or selbige, derselbe, or derselbige; (5) solcher. (See pp. 16 and 17.)

168. They are conjunctive and absolute.

169. The conjunctives are dieser, jener, der, solcher.

170. The absolute, derjenige or der and derselbe. The use of the last has already been explained (see rule 146); derjenige or der is used either before a relative pronoun or genitive case, or before substantives which are so followed, and is often translated by he, she, it or they, the French celui: Derjenige (or der, pronounced with more emphasis than the article) welcher Ihnen dieses gesagt hat, zu who has told you this; diejenigen Leute, welche noch daran zweifelten, those people who yet doubted it.

171. The pronominal gen. of der, viz. dessen, deren, &c. is used instead of the possessive pronoun to avoid ambiguity: da er dem Knaben nicht glaubte, so fragte er dessen (for seinen) Vater, as he did not believe the boy, he asked his (i. e. the boy's) father.

172. This form is also used in preference to the possessive in speaking of

be, or konnte or könnte schreiben, was, or might be able to write; she might find, sie fände, or möchte or möchte finden, she would be able to find.

183. The verb TO BE before a part. pres. is never used in German; and such expressions as I am writing, I was writing, must be rendered respectively by the present and imperfect of the verb to which the participle belongs: ich schreibe, ich schrieb; or ich schreibe (schrieb) eben; or ich bin (war) eben am Schreiben; I shall be writing, Ich werde (alsdann) schreiben.

184. The verb TO DO is never used as an auxiliary, and such phrases as I do (did) write, are rendered by Ich schreibe (schrieb) wirklich, or ja; the adverbs wirklich, ja, serving to give that emphasis which in English is obtained by do, did.

185. To be about is expressed by im Begriffe seyn: I am, was, about to write, Ich bin, war im Begriffe zu schreiben; I shall be about, Ich werde im Begriffe seyn.

THE MOODS.

186. The INDICATIVE is used to affirm, deny, or ask that which is, was or will be.

187. The SUBJUNCTIVE (called in German Conjunctive,) is used when the circumstance affirmed or denied is merely ordered, wished, or implied, as being within the range of possibility; whence it is most frequently found after the verbs bedingen, to make conditions; bitten, to beg; fürchten, besorgen, to apprehend; ermahnen, to exhort; rathen, to advise; scheinen, to seem; wollen, to desire; wünschen, to wish; zweifeln, to doubt; and after the conditional; as Ich würde gehen, wenn ich könnte, I would go, if I could. It is moreover used—

[a] When we quote the saying or opinion of others, although it may not be intended to convey a doubt of the fact: Er sagt er werde kommen, he says, he will come; sie glaubt, es sey nicht thunlich, she thinks it is not feasible.

[b] As an optative, a verb in the indicative being understood: Der Himmel mel bewahre Sie, may heaven preserve you; Er thue was er wolle, let him do what he will.

[c] Instead of the condit. (in the imperf.): es wäre Schade, it would be a pity.

188. When that which is mentioned in the name of others would, if quoted in their own words, appear in a tense different from that of the foregoing ind., the tense of the subj. need not agree with that of the ind. thus: for er sagte, ich will kommen, he said, I will come, er sagte, er wolle (wollte,) kommen, he will come.

189. Daß, that and wenn, if, which frequently precede the subj., may be omitted: er sagte, er werde kommen; könnte ich, so würde ich gehen, could I &c.

190. The INFINITIVE after another verb is used either without or with zu being placed before it.

191. It is without [a] after können, mögen, lassen, dürfen, sollen, wollen, müssen, werden in the fut. and condit.; heißen, to bid; helfen, help; lehren, teach; lernen, learn; hören, hear; sehen, see; fühlen, feel.

[b] In liegen, to lie; sitzen, sit; stehen, stand; stecken, stick; hängen, hang; knien, kneel; kleben, adhere, when preceded by bleiben, to remain: Er blieb stehen, he remained to stand (standing).

[c] In spazieren, preceded by fahren, reiten: Ich fuhr, ritt spazieren, I took a ride or drive.

[d] In betteln, beg; haufiren, hawk; spazieren, preceded by gehen.

[e] Before schlafen, to sleep, preceded by gehen, or sich legen.

[f] After haben in such phrases as, Sie haben gut lachen, you may laugh indeed. (VOUS AVEZ BEAU RIRE); er hat einen Bedienten im Vorzimmer warten, he has a servant waiting in the ante-room.

[g] Machen, when it means to cause: Ich machte sie weinen, I made her cry.

[h] After thun, to do, when followed by nichts als; die Kinder thun nichts als spielen, the children do nothing but play.

[i] After the adjs. gut, böse, übel, schlecht: Hier ist nicht gut seyn, this place is not comfortable.

192. With zu, [a] when the inf. might be supplied by a phrase with the conj. daß; Wir befohlen ihm zu kommen, we ordered him to come, i. e. that he would come.

[b] After such verbs as these:—

Anfangen, to begin Aufhören, to cease
Befehlen, to command
Behaupten, to assert Bekennen, to confess Drohen, to threaten Erhalten, to receive

Erkennen, to acknowledge
Erlauben, to allow Ermangeln, to fail
Erwarten, to expect Fürchten, to fear
Gestatten, to permit

Haben, to have Seyn, to be Scheinen, to appear Verlangen, to desire Wissen, to know
Wünschen, to wish.

[c] After subst. which in English are followed by of or to: der Ruf ein ehrlicher Mann zu seyn, the reputation of being an honest man; Lust zu reisen, a desire to travel (of travelling.)

[d] After adjs.: Glücklich es zu hören, happy to hear it.

[e] After the preps. anstatt or statt, ohne and um, which last is introduced whenever a purpose is expressed by the inf.: Ich that dies, um ihn zu prüfen, I did it for the purpose of trying him.

193. The English frequently use the inf. on the questions when, where, how, what, which, &c. when another mood is employed in German: Do you believe that to be true? Glauben Sie, daß dies wahr sey? I did not suspect him to be that fellow, Ich ließ es mir nicht einfallen, daß er der Kerk wäre; they do not know how to employ themselves, sie wissen nicht, wie sie sich beschäftigen sollen.

194. The English inf. past after the verb to be, is rendered by the inf. pres.: His conduct is to be praised, sein Benehmen ist zu loben.

195. Frequently the inf. past is rendered by the part. pres. as an adj., with zu: a notion highly to be censured, eine sehr zu tadelnde Meinung.

196. How, before the inf. is omitted: He does not know how to conduct himself, er weiß sich nicht zu benehmen.

THE PARTICIPLES.

197. The PART. PRESENT is used in German as an adv. or adj., and never assumes the verbal power: Das Kind kam weinend, the child came weeping; das weinende Kind.

☞ The English part. pres. after the verb to be in a verbal capacity must be translated into a pres. imperf. or fut. (See page 40, rule 183.)

198. When used in a subordinate clause of a sentence, assigning the cause of the circumstance expressed in the principal verb, it must be rendered by a pres. or preterito, preceded by a conjunction:—standing at the window, I can see him, da ich an dem Fenster stehe, so kann ich ihn sehen; standing at the window, I could, &c. da ich an dem Fenster stand; Having stood there, I saw it, da ich da gestanden habe, so habe ich es gesehen;

having seen it, I was called as a witness, da ich es gesehen hatte, so wurde ich als Zeuge gerufen.

199. When used as an adj. it governs the case of a verb from which it is derived: das mir drohende Ungewitter, the thunderstorm which threatens (or threatened) me; das sich verziehende Ungewitter, the (itself) dispersing storm.

It is also used instead of the inf. (See rule 195.)

200. It is used as a subst., the words, Mensch, Mann, Frau, &c., being understood: der Denkende, he who thinks, the thinker—but never as an abstract noun; the inf. being employed instead: The reading, das Lesen. (See substs. neut. page 8.)

201. The PARTICIPLE PAST, unless used in the formation of the preterite tenses, is either an adv. or adj.; but there are several which either from their nature do not admit of the degrees of comparison, or make them with mehr and am meisten, an observation which also applies to the part. pres.

202. It is often used instead of the second person of the imperative; Rutscher! zugefahren, coachman! drive on.

203. After the verb Kommen, the part. past. of verbs of motion, and perhaps a few others, is used instead of the part. pres.: Der Bote kommt gelaufen, for laufend, the messenger comes running.

204. Also with haben, wissen and wollen, instead of the inf. Ich wollte Sie ersucht haben, I would have you requested, for Ich wollte Sie ersuchen.—Both these forms of the part. are however not recommended for imitation.

MISCELLANEOUS REMARKS ON THE VERB.

205. The auxiliary verb relating to several participles, is mentioned only once: Er hat das Buch geschrieben, gedruckt und herausgegeben, he has written, printed and published the book.

206. If the auxiliary is to be moved to the end of a member of a sentence, especially if the next number begin with the same word, it is often omitted: Sobald er mich gesehen (hat), hat er mich angeredet, as soon as he has seen me, he has addressed me.

207. It must be borne in mind that dürfen, können, mögen, müssen, sollen, wollen, (see irreg. verbs,) have a part. past in German, and are conjugated in their compound tenses like other verbs: Er hat gefollt, aber hat nicht gewollt. It is however to be observed that when an inf. is expressed with any of these verbs, they change the part. into an inf.: er hat es thun sollen, wollen, können, &c., he has ought, would, could do it, i. e. he ought, would, could have done it.

The verbs heissen, to bid; helfen, to help; lehren, to teach; lernen, to learn; hören, to hear; sehen, to see; have the same peculiarity.

208. To like is expressed by lieben, but more generally by gern haben, gern essen, to like (to eat); gern trinken, to like (to drink): Ich esse gern Äpfel, I like apples; mein Bruder ist lieber Kirschchen, my brother prefers cherries; seine Kinder essen am liebsten Birnen, his children are fondest of pears.

209. Lassen is employed like FAIRE in French, for to cause, or occasion with the second verb in the inf. pres.:—

Ich lasse mir einen Rock machen, I have a coat making for myself;

Er läßt sich ein Haus bauen, He has a house building for himself;

Haben Sie den Arzt rufen lassen, (for gelassen) Have you sent (caused to send) for the physician.

THE GOVERNMENT OF CASES.

THE NOMINATIVE.

210. The nom. is required :—

[a] As the subject of every verb.

[b] As the object of the following :—seyn, werden, heißen, (to be called), bleiben, dünken, scheinen, to seem : Er scheint mir ein ehrlicher Mann, he seems to me an honest man.

211. This case is also used after als or wie following a neut. verb :—

Er starb als ein Held, he died as a hero, i. e. being one

Er starb wie ein Held, he died like a hero, i. e. as heroes die.

THE GENITIVE.

212. This case is governed [a] by substs. (see rule 125, page 35) ; [b] by adjs. ; [c] by verbs ; [d] by prepos. (See page 32.)

213. It is required by adjectives which admit of the question whose or of what, (weßsen) as des Geldes bedürftig, in want of money :—

Bedürftig	Sachhaft	Theilhaft	unwürdig
bestieffen	Kundig	Ueberdrüssig	Verblühen
befugt	Los	uneingedenk	verdächtig
benöthigt	Mächtig	unfähig	verlufftig
bewußt	müde	ungewiß	verwiesen
Eingedenk	Quitt	ungewohnt	voll
Fähig	Satt	untundig	Werth
froh	schuldig	unwerth	würdig.

214. Angeklagt, and all participles formed from verbs governing the gen.

215. The following are the verbs which govern it : Ich achte des Dinges nicht, I do not mind the thing.

Achten, (or with the accusative)	geschweigen
Bedürfen, ditto	Harren, (or with auf)
brauchen, ditto	Lachen, (or with über)
Denken, } (or with an)	Missbrauchen, (or with the acc.)
Gedenken, }	Pflegen, ditto
Entbehren, (or with the acc.)	Schonen, ditto enthalten	Spotten, (or with über) ermangeln	Verfehlen, (or with the acc.)
erwähnen	Vergessen, ditto
erwehren (sich)	Wahrnehmen, ditto
Gebrauchen, (or with the acc.)	Warten, ditto.
genießen, ditto

leben, sterben and seyn, (with Willens, der Meinung, &c.) also occasionally govern this case.

216. Some verbs govern the person in the accusative and the thing in the genitive ; the latter on the question OF WHAT ? Er hat ihn eines Verbrechens angeklagt, he has accused him of a crime. Such are :—

Anklagen	bezüchtigen	entledigen	überzeugen
Belehren	Entladen	entsetzen, to dismiss	Verweisen
berauben	entlasten	Ueberführen	versichern
beschuldigen	entlassen	überheben	Würdigen.

217. Most reflexive verbs having the reflexive pron. in the acc. require the person or thing in the gen. : Er bediente sich seiner und seines Einflusses, he made use of him and of his influence.

Bedienen	enthalten	erwehren
befleißigen	entsinnen	Freuen, (also with über) begeben, (renounce)	entschlagen	Getrösten
bemächtigen	entzöhen	Röhlen
bemeistern	entübrigen	Schämen
bescheiden	entwöhnen	Ueberführen
besinnen	erbarmen, (also with über)	Versehen
Entäussern	erinnern, also with an)	Weigern.

THE DATIVE.

218. This case is governed [a] by adjs. ; [b] by verbs ; [c] by preps. (See pp. 32 and 33.)

219. The following are the adjs. which require the subst. they govern in this case ; they all admit of the questions, to whom or to what ? Er ist mir geneigt, he is kind to me.

Abgeneigt	einträglich	Möglich	unerträglich
abhold	entbehrlich	Nachtheilig	unvergeßlich
abtrünnig	ergeben	nahe	unverhofft
ähnlich	erinnerlich	nöthig	unwiderstehlich
angeboren	erwünscht	nothwendig	unzeitig
angeerb	erwartet	nütlich	Verantwortlich
angehörig	Gebührlich	Peinlich	verbindlich
angelegen	gedehlich	Recht	verbunden
angemessen	gehorsam	Schädlich	verdächtig
angenehm	geläufig	schändlich	verderblich
angestammt	gelegen	schätzbar	verdrießlich
abhängig	gemäß	scheinbar	verhaft
anständig	gemein	schimpflich	verständlich
anstoßig	gemessen	schmeichelhaft	verwandt
ärgerlich	geneigt	schmerzhaft	verwehrt
Bange	geständig	schrecklich	vertheilhaft
bedenklich	getreu	schuldig	Werth
begreiflich	gewachsen	schwindlich	widerlich
behaglich	gewogen	Treu	widerpenstig
behüßlich	geziemend	treulos	widerwärtig
beliebig	gleich	tröstlich	widrig
bewußt	gleichgültig	trüßlich	willkommen
beifällig	gnädig	Uebel	wohl
Dankbar	günstig	überflüssig	zugänglich
dienlich	Heilsam	übrig	zugebacht
dienstbar	hinderlich	überlegen	zugehörig
Eigen	held	unausstehlich	zugehan
eigenthümlich	lästig	unbeschadet	zuständig
einleuchtend	lieb	unbewußt	zutraglich.

220. Also any of these used with un.

221. Also many adjs. with the affixes bar and werth : Er ist mir dankbar, bemerkenswerth, he is grateful, remarkable to me.

222. Also those preceded by zu : Das Haus ist Ihnen zu klein, the house is too small for you.

223. Also participles formed from verbs governing this case.

☞ In many instances für with the acc. may be used instead of the dat. : Das ist mir (or für mich) bequem, that is convenient to me.

224. After active verbs the person (and occasionally the thing) to whose advantage or disadvantage the action tends, is put in the dat. : Er gab das Buch meinem Bruder, aber diesem ist es gestohlen worden, he gave the book to my brother, but the latter has been robbed of it.

☞ In such verbs the dat. must be used, although the acc. should be wanting : Er hat mir geschrieben, he has written to me.

225. Many intransitive verbs require the person in the dative.—Such are :—

Abhelfen	drohen	nachgehen	Wahrsagen
abrathen	Einstehen	nachsehen	weichen
absterreden	Fluchen	nachstellen	widerprechen
aufschauern	folgen	nützen	widerstehen
aufpassen	Gehorchen	wochen	willfahren
aufwachen	Helfen	Schaden	winken
aushelfen	huldigen	schmeicheln	wohlwollen
ausweichen	Lächeln	steuern	Zuhören
Begegnen	leuchten	Trauen	zurufen
beipflichten	lohnern	tragen	zusehen
beistehen	Nachahmen	Vorarbeiten	zutrinken
bestimmen	nachdenken	vorbeugen	zuvorkommen
Danken	nacheifern	vorleuchten	zwinkern.
dienen

And others having the prefixes, ab, an, auf, bei, ein, entgegen, nach, unter, vor, wider, and zu.

226. All these verbs may be turned into the passive impers. with or without a^o nom. case : Der Sache ist abgeholfen worden, the thing has been remedied ; Es wurde mir davon abgerathen, I was dissuaded from it.

227. The following intransitives require the dative, but cannot take the passive form—

Angehören	entkommen	Gefallen	Obliegen
anhängen	entlaufen	gehören	Passen
anstehen	entsagen	genügen	Scheinen
auffallen	entsprechen	gleichen	seyn
auffressen	entspringen	glücken	Verunglücken
ähneln	entstehen	Kosten, (to create expense)	vorkommen
Beifallen	entwachsen	Mangeln 66 Int.	Werden
beikommen	entweichen	missfallen	widerfahren
bleiben	entwischen	missglücken	Zufallen
Einfallen	erscheinen	misslingen	zuflehen
entfahren	Fehlen	Nacharten	zugehören
entfallen	fehl schlagen		zufressen, &c.
entgehen

228. The following reflective verbs also govern the dative of the person : anmassen, einbilden, vornehmen, ausbedingen, getrauen, vorstellen : Ich stelle mir vor, I imagine.

229. Impersonal verbs, purely intransitive, likewise require this case which, when placed before the verb, renders es superfluous: Es beliebt mir, or mir beliebt, I please; es ist mir warm, or mir ist warm, I am hot.

Es ahnet	Es Gebricht	Es kostet, (also	Es schwebt vor
— Begegnet	— gebührt	with the acc.)	Augen
— beliebt	— geht gut, &c.	— läßt, (suits)	— sitzt im
— behagt	— gehört	— leuchtet in die	Köpfe
— bekömmt	— gelingt	Augen	— steckt
— Dauert (lasts)	— genügt	— leuchtet ein	— steht frei
— dünkt (also	— geräth	— liegt (depends)	— steht an with the acc.)	— gereicht	— Mangelt	— stößt auf
— Eignet	— geziemt	— mißfällt	— Thut wohl
— efelt	— glückt	— Schadet	— träumt
— entfällt	— graust	— schaudert	— verschlägt
— fällt, leicht,	— grüelt	— scheint (seems)	— Währt
schwer, &c.	— hangt	— schlägt ein	— widersteht
— fällt auf	— ist warm, &c.	— — fehlt	— wird leicht,
— fällt ein, (oc-	— kömmt gele-	— schwindelt	&c.
curs)	gen, zu Statten	— schimmert vor	— wurmt im
— fehlt	— kömmt an	den Augen	Köpfe
		— schmedt	— ziemt.

230. Often für with the acc. is used instead of the dative: keine Blumen blühen für ihn, (instead of ihm), no flowers bloom for him.

231. The dat. is used instead of the poss. pron.: Es schwebt mir vor den Augen, instead of vor meinen Augen, it hovers before my sight (see rule 145.)

232. It is also employed as a pleonasm in the familiar style: Das war dir eine Lust! that was a pleasure indeed!

THE ACCUSATIVE.

233. This case is governed [a] by adjs.; [b] by verbs; [c] by prepos. (See pp. 32 and 33.)

234. ADJECTIVES require this case, if they refer to MEASURE, WEIGHT, AGE, TIME, or WORTH; and on the questions HOW, HOW LONG, BROAD, DEEP, HEAVY, OLD, MUCH? &c. Es ist einen Thaler werth, it is worth a dollar. They are: Alt, breit, dick, groß, hoch, lang, reich, schwer, weit, werth.

235. The VERB requires the acc. on the question WHOM? or WHAT? and indicates the immediate object of the action, whether it be a person or a thing; consequently all active verbs, and neuter, when used actively: Er liebt ihn, he loves him; er geht einen Gang, he goes (takes) a walk.

236. To this class also belong all reflexive and impersonal verbs not previously enumerated: Ich freue mich deines Glückes, I rejoice (myself) at your happiness; Es friert mich, or mich friert, I am cold.

237. Substantives expressing time are in the acc. on the questions WHEN? HOW LONG? HOW OLD? HOW LARGE? HOW HIGH? HOW MUCH? Sie liest den ganzen Tag, she reads the whole day.

☞ The questions, at what TIME OF DAY? HOW OFTEN? require the genitive. (see p. 30) except Woche, which is always in the acc. zwei Mal die Woche, twice a week.

238. The verbs nennen, heißen, (to be called,) schelten, schimpfen, (to call names,) taufen, (to give a name in baptism,) require two accusatives: Ich nannte ihn einen Thoren, I called him a simpleton.

239. Some of the interjections such as ach! O! are occasionally followed by the gen. or acc., no doubt in consequence of some word formerly used with the interj. but now omitted. Woh and wohl, when used as interjs. take the dative case, which they also do as adjs., and we say wohl, weh mir! as we say, mit ist wohl, or weh.

ARRANGEMENT OF WORDS IN SENTENCES.

PLACE OF THE NOMINATIVE.

240. The regular place of the nominative is in affirmative and negative sentences, BEFORE the verb, and in interrogative and inter. negat. sentences, AFTER it: Ich habe es gesehen, I have seen it; ich habe es nicht gesehen; habe ich es gesehen? habe ich es nicht gesehen?

241. In the regular construction, the complement or adj. joined to a subject by means of the verb to be—all the cases governed by the verb—the adverbs—participles and infinitives—the subordinate members serving to express time or other circumstances—in short, every thing directly or indirectly dependent on the verb, is placed after it.

242. It is however permitted to place any of these at the head of a sentence, for the sake of emphasis or euphony; but then it becomes compulsory to place the nom. after the verb.

Examples of—

REGULAR CONSTRUCTION:

Der Thurm ist hoch, the tower is high,
Das Geld ist mein, the money is mine,
Er lobt ihn, he praises him,
Wir gaben es ihm, we gave it to him,
Ihr sprecht von uns, you speak of us,
Sie gingen eilig, they went hastily,
Er war einen Tag hier, he was here a day,
Sie sind angekommen, they are arrived,
Sie können es nicht wissen, you cannot know it,
Sie sagte es schluchzend, she said it sobbing, Ich glaube es, da ich muß, I believe it, since I must,
Ihr Vater sagte, thun sie es, her father said, do it,
Sie haben es also nicht gethan, you have then not done it,

TRANSPOSITION:

hoch ist der Thurm.
mein ist das Geld.
ihn lobt er.
ihm gaben wir es.
von uns sprecht ihr.
eilig gingen sie.
einen Tag war er hier.
angekommen sind sie.
wissen können Sie es nicht.
schluchzend sagte sie es.
da ich muß, glaube ich es.
thun sie es, sagte ihr Vater.
also haben Sie es nicht gethan

243. All the adverbs used as conjunctions have the power of throwing the nom. behind the verb. like also, exc.: auch, doch, entweder, war, with which the nom. is only transposed when emphasis is intended.

Auch ich habe ihn gekannt, I too have known him
Auch habe ich ihn gekannt, I have known him too.

244. If wenn is omitted the deficiency is indicated (as in English with the omission of if,) by the nom. being placed after the verb. (See rule 189.)

245. If the nom. moved after the verb, consists of one substantive or more, the dative or accusative goes sometimes before it, if either should be a pron.:

Mir sagte es Ihr Vater nicht, to me your father did not tell it.

OF THE VERB.

246. The general position of the verb with respect to the nom. has just been stated; yet frequently it is moved entirely to the end of a sentence, or at least, after all the words which are immediately dependent on it.

247. This removal takes place, whenever the sentence begins with a word of a relative power.—Such are—

[c] The interrogative prons. or advs. on their assuming a relative power: Lassen Sie mich wissen, wer der Mann war, wo er sich aufhält, womit er sich beschäftigt, weshalb er hierher gekommen ist, was er Ihnen gesagt hat, und wann er wieder zu kommen gedenkt, let me know, who the man is, where he resides, with what he employs himself, what he has told you, and when he intends to return.

[d] The following conjunctions—

Als	daß	je, before adjs.	seitdem
Bevor	ehe	nachdem	so, (if) & its comp
bis	Falls	nun, (since)	während
da	im Falle	ob, & its com-	weil
dafern	gleichwie	pounds	wenn, & its comp.
damit, (in order that)	indem	seit	wie, ditto.

Als ich den Kaufman, welcher Ihnen das Geld schuldig ist, zum letzten Mal sah, the last time, when I saw the merchant who owes you the money.

248. These rules apply to the simple tenses of both the ind. and subj.

249. In the comp. tenses the auxiliary verb is subject to the same rules, but the inf. and part. (unless placed at the head of a sentence,) must go last. (see Verbs.)

250. If there be an inf. and a part., the inf. as the governing word, goes last, (see the same.)

251. If there be two infinitives, the governing one is placed last: Sie werden sie nicht leicht von der Güte Ihrer Absichten überzeugen können, you will not easily be able to convince them of the goodness of your intentions.

252. The imperative always precedes the nom.: Thun Sie es bald, do it soon.

THE GENITIVE, DATIVE AND ACCUSATIVE.

253. The regular place of these cases is after the verb (comp. with rule 241 and 242).

254. If two of these occur together, the acc. generally precedes the gen. and the dat. the acc. :—

Er hat ihn seines Amtes entsetzt, he has deposed him of his office

Erzählen Sie meinem Vater den Vorfall, tell the occurrence to my father.

255. If the acc. however be a pron., and the dat. a subst. or even a pron. of more weight in the pronunciation, or if it be desired to give emphasis to the acc., this case is placed first :—

Er erzählt es meinem Oheim, he tells it to my uncle

Soll ich es Ihnen erzählen, shall I tell it you?

256. Cases governed by prepositions are usually placed after the other cases: Er theilte uns jene Nachricht von Paris aus mit, he communicated this intelligence to us from (out of) Paris.

257. The vocative may be placed either before or after the verb.

ADJECTIVES.

258. The position of the adjective is the same as in English, except that it is placed after the case it may happen to govern: Wir finden ihn zu jedem Geschäfte untauglich, we find him unfit for every business; sie schienen sich keines Vergehens bewußt gewesen zu seyn, they seemed not to be conscious of any crime.

259. The position of the personal pronoun has been explained; that of the others is the same as in English, except that the demonstrat. is occasionally placed before the possess.: dieser Ihr Wunsch, this wish of yours

ADVERBS.

260. Adverbs cannot, as in English, be placed between the nom. and the verb, unless the latter happen to be moved to the end of the sentence —

Wir sehen ihn oft, we often see him

Da wir ihn oft sehen, as we often see him.

261. Its usual place, when the verb governs but one case, is after that case; and if two, it is between them.

Ich werde ihm morgen schreiben, I shall write to him to-morrow

Er ging ihm geschwind entgegen, he went to meet him quickly

Ich schrieb ihm gestern einen Brief, I wrote him a letter yesterday

Ich habe ihm gestern einen Brief geschrieben, I have written, &c.

262. If the verb governs a preposition with a noun, the adverb is placed between the verb and the preposition.

Er ging geschwind zu ihm, he went quickly to him.

263. Frequently the place of the adverb is of no importance, and we may say for instance, er händigte schnell ihm das Buch ein, or ihm schnell das Buch ein, he quickly handed him the book.

264. Often, however, the position of the adv. requires great circumspection, although it cannot otherwise be determined by rules, except that the adverb should generally stand before the word it determines, as may be seen in the following phrases:—

Sie haben beständig des Sonntags Gesellschaft, they have constantly company on Sundays

Sie haben des Sonntags beständig Gesellschaft, they have constant company on Sundays

Er fand mühsam den Weg, he found the way with difficulty

Er fand den Weg mühsam, he found the way difficult

Ich traf ihn glücklich zu Hause, I found him happily at home

Ich traf ihn zu Hause glücklich, I found him happy at home

Ich muß ihm diesen Abend nothwendig schreiben, I must necessarily write to him this evening

Ich muß ihm nothwendig diesen Abend, &c. I must necessarily this evening, &c.

Ich muß nothwendig ihm, &c. I must necessarily write to him, &c.

265. Nicht, if the negative regards the whole sentence, is mostly placed after all the cases governed by a verb, and in comp. tenses immediately before the part. or inf.

Wir gaben ihm das Buch nicht, we did not give him the book

Wir haben es ihm nicht gegeben, we have not given it to him.

266. If the negation relates to any part of the sentence, nicht is placed before that part :—

Wir gaben nicht ihm das Buch, we did not give the book to HIM

Wir gaben ihm nicht das Buch, sondern das Papier, we did not give him THE BOOK, but the paper

Sie schreiben oft nicht gut, you do not frequently write well

Sie schreiben nicht oft gut, it is not often you write well.

267. Genug, enough, is, as in English, placed after the word to which it relates.

268. Adverbs are always placed after the substantives to which they relate:

Der Weg rechts, the way to the right

Das Leben jenseits, the life beyond (the grave.)

269. As many adverbs are also used as adjs., care must be taken not to decline a word of quality when placed before adjs. adverbially:

Es ist ein außerordentliches Wetter, it is an extraordinary weather

MISCELLANEOUS ADDENDA.

270. Collective substs. in the sing. can never govern the verb or pron. in the plur. as is often the case in English:

Das Volk ist glücklich,

Die Völker sind glücklich,

The people (nation) is happy.

The people (nations) are happy.

Es ist immer glücklich gewesen, It has (they have) always been happy.

271. SOME or ANY in the sense of one kind or another, is rendered by irgend ein, &c.

Kennen sie irgend einen guten Arzt? Do you know some good Physician?

272. Der Gleiche, the equal, is always in the gen. when joined to a poss. pron.

Halte dich an deines Gleichen, keep to your equals.

273. Wohl, doch and ja often appear as pleonasms.—39, Int.

274. All substs. and words used as substs., are written and printed with a capital initial.

275. Lang, when placed after a subst. means during.

Ein Jahr lang, during a year, a whole year.

276. In the middle of, is expressed by mitten auf, mitten in, or mitten unter.

Mitten auf dem Felde und mitten unter den Feinden,

In the middle of the field and in the midst of the enemies.

Der Baum steht mitten in dem Garten

The tree stands in the middle of the garden.

277. When the first member of a sentence begins with such a word as als, da, wenn, &c., the subsequent member generally begins with so :—

Da ich sehr müde war, so ging ich sogleich zu Bette,

As I was very tired, I went immediately to bed.

278. The gen. as well as the acc. are sometimes used as absolute cases, particularly in the elevated style, instead of placing a prep. before the subst. :—

Eiligen Schrittes, for mit eiligem Schritte, with a hasty stride.

Hände und Herz zu Gott erheben, with heart and hands raised to God.

279. Aber, but, may be placed either at the beginning of a sentence, or after several other words, without either influencing the position or sense of any part of it.—After a negation, ABER is generally rendered by sondern.

280. Wenn or ob, with auch, gleich, schon, wohl, signify ALTHOUGH, and are generally separated by the nom. :—

Wenn ich auch keine Erlaubniß erhalten hätte,
Although I should have received no permission.

281. Gar, before a negative, implies a total exclusion: gar nicht, not at all; gar nichts, nothing at all; in general it strengthens the meaning of the word to which it is added, 81, Int.

282. A member of a sentence cannot in German be properly made the object of a verb; wherefore a fictitious case is mostly introduced either in the shape of a pron. or compound preposition :—

Ich weiß es, daß er Recht hat, I know he is right.
Wir zweifeln nicht daran, daß er Unrecht hatte,
We did not doubt of his being in the wrong.

N. B. Es, in the first sentence, might be dispensed with; but daran, in the second, is absolutely required; as we say, an etwas zweifeln, to doubt of something.

283. The verbs ernennen, to nominate; machen, to make; werden, to become; and others implying change in the subject, are followed by zu :—

Der König ernannte ihn zum Gesandten,
The king appointed him as an ambassador.

284. Werden, in the imperf., besides wurde, wurdest, wurde, makes also ward, wardst, ward, which is most usual in the passive voice.

285. The relative pron. is sometimes omitted in English, but must always be expressed in German :—

Das Schauspiel, welches Sie sahen, war eines von Shakspeare,
The play you saw was one of Shakspeare's.

286. Wer or was, followed by auch, means whoever or whatever, and are usually separated :—

Wer er auch sey, und was er auch thue,
Whoever he may be, and whatever he may do.

287. According to rule 189, the English part. pres. must be turned into the pres. or imperf., preceded by a conjunction.—The most usual of these are als, da, wenn, which are also often translated by when or as; but als implies something contemporaneous, when the circumstance occurred but once; wenn, a similar thing, when the circumstance is habitual; and da, when the circumstance stated under it, is the CAUSE of the one with which that circumstance is connected :—

Als wir in die Stadt kamen, regnete es,
When we came (or coming) to town, it rained;
Wenn wir in die Stadt kommen, regnet es immer,
When we come to town, it always rains;
Da es regnete, blieben wir zu Hause,
As it rained, we stayed at home.

288. Or after ein, or any other number, may be rendered by the gen. or by von or unter with the dat.; as, one of them, einer derselben, einer von ihnen, einer unter ihnen.

289. OF MINE, OF THINE, &c., is rendered by the gen. or von, thus:—

He is no friend of mine, Er ist keiner von meinen Freunden, or meiner Freunde.

290. The double gen. sometimes used in English to express the idea of one or several among many, is rendered by the following form:—

291. So...als, (and sometimes wie,) are used for the comparative of equality:—

Einer ist so reich als (or wie) der andere, one is as rich as the other.

292. No, not any, and none, are rendered by kein, keiner, &c.

293. Nicht is often found in German where in English it would appear as a pleonasm:

Es ist mehr als ein Monat seitdem er nicht geschrieben hat,

It is more than a month since he has (not) written;

Wie oft habe ich Ihnen nicht erzählt!

How often have I (not) been relating it to you!

ON THE FORMATION OF WORDS.

There are very few words in the German language which can be considered as primitive; the majority of monosyllables even being evidently of a derivative kind. Those of more than one syllable are all either compound or derivatives. The number of monosyllabic words cannot be increased, except by the admission of terms from the provincial and sister-dialects. But that of the polysyllables, although there be some limit in the formation of derivatives, may be endlessly augmented by compositions of various kinds.

The general rule respecting the making of compound words is to place the defining term before the defined. Yet as this process requires an intimate knowledge of the language and its analogies, which cannot be acquired except by very extensive reading, it has not been thought advisable to add any special rules on this subject; since it is presumed that a student will not attempt to make new words before he has ascertained that there are none in use capable of expressing his ideas; and then he will be able to study native grammarians. Nor is the following dictionary of prefixes and affixes intended as a guide for creating words, but rather as a help to understand those in existence, many of which are not met with even in the most copious dictionaries. The learner will however observe that many of these particles are of so obscure an origin, and are applied in such a variety of senses, that there cannot always be fixed rules respecting their meaning. In such cases he must content himself with taking the words as he finds them, and without regard to their composition, learn to employ them in the sense dictated by custom.

 PREFIXES AND AFFIXES

ALPHABETICALLY ARRANGED.

Ab, (pref. sep.) off, away, (Lat. de, ex, ab, re,) implies removal, liberation, weakness or unpleasantness: abreisen, to depart; abnehmen, to take off, to decline; Absehen, horror.

al, (aff.) in words derived from the Lat. in ale, alis, ile.

all, (pref. insep. and adj.) all (Lat. omni) Allmacht, omnipotence.

an, (prep., pref. separ. in verbs,) near, at, close to, (Lat. ad,) is the opposite of ab, and implies approach, attachment, success, agreeableness: annähern, to approach; anhängen, to be attached; anfangen, to begin; angenehm, agreeable.

an, termin. of words from the Lat. in anus: Capellan, chaplain.

ant, termin. of words from the Lat. in ans-antis: Elephant.

ar, _____ ar, are, aris, arius, and arium :

Arzt, Singular, Inventar, Notar.

artig, (aff. adv.) from Art, kind, synonymous with icht: thonartig, clayey.

at, _____ Lat. words, ates, atum, atus: Magnat, Concordat, Advocat.

dt, _____ as-atis, Universität.

auf, (pref. sep. and prep.) on, upon, up, 1—a tendency downwards upon a given point: auflegen, to lay upon; 2—a similar tendency upwards: aufsteigen, to rise; 3—for offen, open; aufmachen, to open; auffstehen, to stand open.

bar, (aff.) probably from the obsolete verb barcn, to bear, or produce; is joined to roots of verbs and to nouns, and forms adverbs, verbs and adjs. With the addition of en, it forms verbs: offenbaren, to reveal; and with that of feit, subst.: Ehrbarkeit, propriety. Sometimes it is translated by able, or ably: ehrbar, honourable; sometimes by full: danfbar, grateful; but in general it has the meaning of capability, worthiness, abounding with.

be, (pref. insep.) the root of bei, near; expresses 1—proximity: berufen, to call together; 2—an extension of an action over an object, (upon,) by which means neut. verbs are often made active, and a sense wherein it is also used in a few English verbs: berauben, to deprive (bereave,) from rauben, to steal; beschnieren, to besmear, from schmieren, to smear; 3—to be or bring upon: bewohnen, to inhabit; befruchten, to fructify; 4—to effect by means of a thing or quality: beleben, to animate; befreien, to liberate. 5—In common conversation, to express vexation at some offensive term: Ich will dich bejournern, I will squire you, i. e. I will teach you to call me (or yourself) squire.—In a few verbs the e of be has been dropped: bleichen, to bleach; bleiben, to remain; bangen, to be apprehensive.

bei, bey, (pref. sep. and prep.) probably derived from be, and signifying by, near (proximus): beilegen, to attribute; Beistand, assistance.

ber, term. of words from the Lat. in bra, bris; Amber, October.

chen, (aff.) expressing smallness, neatness, and sometimes contempt.—N. B. If the word to which chen is to be attached ends in e, this letter is cut off: Affe, ape; Aeffchen, little ape; and if the subst. ends in ch, g, or sch, el is placed between: Buch, book; Büchlein, little book.

d, is joined to infins. to form the part. present.

d, or de, (aff.) of many abstract substs. formed from verbs: as Jagd, chase, from jagen; Freude, joy, from freuen.

e, (aff.) which stands, 1—as the dat. sing. of many substs. masc. and neut.; 2—as the plur. of the 2d decl.; 3—as the mark of several cases in the decl. of adjs. and prons.; 4—as that of several persons of the verb; 5—as a euphonous addition to many monosyllabic substs. chiefly of the fem. gender; 6—as a termin. joined to collectives beginning with ge, and closing with b, d, g, s; 7—as a final of abstract and concrete nouns formed from adjs.: das Grösse, the grand; die Grösse, the grandeur; das Säure, the acidity; die Säure, the acid; 8—as a corruption of the Lat. termin. is: die Classe, the class; 9—ditto, from us: Marrisse, narcissus; 10—ditto, from a: Larve, mask, from larva.

ei, ey, (aff.) joined to substs. (frequently to such as end in er.) and evidently of foreign origin, (probably from the Lat. ia.) particularly as the accent falls upon it, which is never the case with real German terminations. It corresponds with the English term. y: Abtei, abbey; Gerberei, tannery; Schmeichelei, flattery; particularly in words derived from the Lat. in ia, or the French in ie, (which however now more generally end in ie): Ins tannei, tyranny. Frequently it is translated by the term. ing: Mahlerei, painting; Gärtnerei, gardening.

ef, termination of words from the Lat. in eca: Bibliothek, library.

el, (aff.) expressing 1—a diminutive, as used in the south of Germany, and by authors in the sportive style: Mädel, schau mir ins Gesicht—Bürger; 2—in many words in general use, imparting an idea of smallness: Hügel, hill, from hoch, high, (or the old German foch, mountain); 3—agency instead of er (which see.) In adjs. and adverbs, its meaning is not distinguishable, and in many words it is not of German origin, being a substitute for the Lat. terminations ela, ula, elus, elum, &c.; also for that of plum: Tempel, temple, from templum.

eln, (aff.) of verbs, to which it frequently imparts a diminutive sense: lächeln, to smile, from lachen, to laugh. It also signifies pretension or imitation: andächteln, to play the devotee; and lastly repetition, in the same sense as ern: betteln, to beg, to ask repeatedly, from bitten, to request.

em, m, termin. of the dat. masc. and neut. of the first three declensions of adjs. and prons.

emp, (pref. insep.) related to ant and ent, and only found in empfangen, empfehlen, empfinden, and their derivatives.

en, n, (aff.) denoting 1—the declinable cases of decls. v. and vi., and the dat. plur. of all the declensions of subs.; 2—several cases in the declensions of adjs. and prons.; 3—infinitives of all verbs, as well as substs. formed from them,* the past participles of many irregular verbs, and the first and third pers. plur. of all the tenses; 4—qualities of things in adjs. formed from substs., as hänfen, hempen, from hanf; eichen, oaken, from Eiche; kupfern, copper, from Kupfer;† 5—a termination for substs. and adjs. with out a distinguishable meaning.

en, in plurals from the Lat. æ, exequien, from exequia.

ent, (pref. insep.) probably derived with ant, from an, in and ein, (Lat. contra, versus, anti, inde); it indicates 1—commencement: entbrennen, to kindle; 2—origin, production: entstehen, to arise from; 3—departure: entlaufen, to escape; 4—privation, for un: entfiegeln, to unseal.

ent, from the Lat. termin. ens-entis, and entum: Student, Testament.

enz, from the Lat. termin. encia: Conferenz.

er, (pref. insep.) signifying 1—elevation, up: erheben, for aufheben, to elevate; 2—displaying or opening: erbrechen, to break open; erzählen, to relate; 3—effecting: erbitten, to obtain by asking; 4—becoming or making: ermuntern, to become or make cheerful; 5—extension and continuation: ergießen, to pour out; ertragen, to bear; 6—exhaustion or termination: erschöpfen, to exhaust; erschlagen, to slay.—In many verbs and their derivatives, of which the root has either been lost, or has changed its original signification, the meaning of er is not clear; an observation which is applicable to be, ent, ge, ver, &c. N. B. Both ent and er belong exclusively to verbs from which other words found with these prefixes are derived.

er, (aff.) 1—in the plur. of the 3d decl.; 2—in the decl. of prons. and adjs.; 3—in the comparison of adjs. and advs. where it is probably the term. of mehr, more; 4—to express the agency of a man: Gärtner, gardener; in a sense in which it is frequently formed by the change of n of the inf.: Maler, painter, from malen, to paint; 5—to point out a man belonging to a country or town: ein Londoner, a Londoner; 6—to point out a man of a certain age or condition: ein Fünfsziger, a man of fifty; Bürger, citizen; 7—sometimes to signalize a male, as the counterpart of the feminine termin. e: ein Wittwer, a widower, in opposition to Wittwe, a widow; 8—in the names of some birds it seems to be the abbreviation of Nar, a large bird: Adler, eagle; 9—to express instrumentality: Bohrer, gimblet, from bohren, to pierce; 10—in some adjs. and substs. its meaning is not evident, and it is sometimes doubtful whether it is an affix, or belongs to the root; 11—finally it is often a corruption of foreign terminations: Kaiser, emperor, from Cæsar; Körper, body, from corpus; Pharisäer, pharisee, from pharisæus; Theater, from theatrum.

* The active power of en is very strikingly visible in the formation of verbs from substs. and adjs., and as such not quite lost in English; e. gr. schwärzen, to blacken, from schwarz, black; töbten, to deaden, kill, from tödt, dead.

en, (aff.) composed of er and en, and uniting both meanings. 1—It is often joined to substs. instead of en, to express a quality: zinnern, made of tin, from zinn, (see en); 2—to verbs to express effecting: räuchern, to smoke, make smoke; ein(sch)lafen, to lull to sleep; 3—to express imitation: fälschern, to behave like a calf; 4—repetition: zittern, to tremble; 5—a desire: (sch)lafen, to be sleepy; (which are mostly impers.) 6—obscure in many adjs. and verbs.

et, t, 1—a verbal sign, especially of the past tenses; 2—the sign of the ordin. numbs. to 19 incl.; 3—a final of abstr. substs. formed from verbs: Macht, might, from mögen, may; 4—an intensive in some verbs: (sch)achten, to slaughter, from (sch)lagen, to strike. N. B. In the last three significations it is always t alone.

et, from the terminations eta, etum, etes: Magnet.

für, (pref. sep.) for (pro): Fürsprecher, intercessor; Fürsorge, providence, having care for another.

ge, (pref. insep.) anciently ga, gi, fe, fi, fo, has generally the power of the Lat. con. It indicates 1—union and partnership: Gesell, companion; 2—collectives, (with a change of the radical vowels): Gesflügel, fowl, from fliegen; Gebirg, mountainous district, from Berg; Gestirn, constellation, from Stern, (of these many take the final c); 3—iteratives: Gelärm, noise, from Lärm; Geschrei, screaming, from Schrei; 4—an intensive in verbs: gedenken, to think of, from denken; 5—the general sign of the past participle. 6—In many words (in some it appears only as g: Glied, limb; in others as f: flug, prudent,) it seems either a superfluous appendage, or at least very difficult of explanation. It is found in all the Teutonic languages, and was formerly frequent in English; where it has left a slight trace in the words yeoman and enough, Germ. genug.

haft, an adj. termin. derived from haben or haften, to have or fix. Joined to substs., verbs or adjs., it indicates that the thing, state, action or quality is attached to something; as tugendhaft, virtuous, possessing virtue; (sch)merzhaft, painful; wehnhaft, dwelling. Sometimes it implies only capability: wehrhaft, defensible; and still more frequently likeness: fabelhaft, fabulous; mädchenhaft, maidenlike; in which sense it is synonymous with artig and mässig.

heit, a subst. term. mostly attached to adjs. and expressing an abstraction or union. It corresponds with the Engl. termin. head and hood, (ness, ty), and is derived from an old German subst. signifying person: Gottheit, godhead; Mannheit, manhood.

heim, (pref. sep. adv.) home: heimgehen, to go home; Heimweh, homesickness.

her, (pref. insep.) Lat. huc; here, hither: herkommen, to come here.

hin, — — — — — illuc; there, thither: hinkommen, to get there. N. B. These particles are often used in German, when in English the simple verb would be employed. They are frequently joined to the preps. in hinter, (pref. insep.) behind, adj., (Lat. retro): hintergehen, to deceive.

(for in) aus, auf, unter, ab, über, to express the direction of the motion, besides those of, to and from the person speaking.

icht, as a subst. termin. implies collection, similar to the Lat. etum: Rehricht, sweepings. Joined to substs. to form adjs. it indicates likeness, holzich, woody; thöricht, foolish.

ic. (See ci.)

ig, (aff.) in subs. probably instead of ing and of no assignable meaning. In adjs. it implies a having, being, or causing that which is expressed in the word to which it is attached: freudig, joyful; schläfrig, sleepy; verdächtig, suspicious, i. e. creating suspicion; verig, former; heutig, belonging to this day. It is sometimes added as an intermediate link for the syllable feit, for although we do not say frömmig, we say Frömmigkeit. The same is done for the formation of some verbs: bändig, to tame, from Band.

il, ill, termin. from the Lat. ilus, illus: April.

in, pref. to substs. corresponding with the Lat. in: Inhalt, contents. Verbs prefer the syllable ein or ent: einhalten or innehalten, to stop; enthalten, to contain.

in, iner, from Lat. words in ina, inus: Termin; Capuziner.

inz, from the Lat. incia: Provinz.

ing, is a subst. termin. related to ling and ung, (Eng. ing.) and of an obscure meaning: Fräting, herring.

inn, in, anciently a word signifying SHE, marks many nouns to be fem. as er marks them to be masc.: Schäfer, shepherd; Schäferinn, shepherdess. Custom requires er to be prefixed to inn, even with substs. EXCLUSIVELY relating to females, as Wöchnerinn, a woman in child-bed, from Woche, week; although we cannot say Wöchner.

iren, or ieren, is joined to substs. and adjs. and turns them into verbs: buchstabiren, to spell; particularly to words of foreign origin: regieren, to rule.

ier, termin. from irium, irum, ius, and the French ier and ière.

isch, (aff.) related to ig and icht, and the English ish, ic, ical, signifies possession, origin, similarity, conformity or agreement: neidisch, envious, (having envy); himmlisch, heavenly, (belonging to or originating from heaven); närrisch, foolish, (fool-like.) It is added to names of countries, towns and persons to turn them into adjectives: Dänisch, from Däne; Wienerisch, from Wiener, an inhabitant of Vienna; Lutherisch, Lutheran. It is particularly added to words of Latin or Greek origin with the terminations is, icus, and ikos: Katholisch, Catholic. Sometimes the word receiving this addition varies its final for the sake of euphony, and particularly drops e or en; some also change their vowels: Franzose, Frenchman; Französisch, French. N. B. The syllable isch is in meaning closely related to er, and thence when euphony requires it, er is added to the names of towns instead of isch, e. gr. der Magdeburger Dom, the cathedral of Magdeburg, instead of Magdeburgische.

¶ The terminations isch, ig, icht and ich, although more or less related to each other, require great discrimination in their use, not only in the formation of new words, (which, I repeat, the learner is by no means to attempt before he has made himself absolutely at home in the language,) but in the application of words which are found with these terminations; thus, launig means humorous; launisch, whimsical; findlich, filial; findisch, childish; argwöhnisch, having suspicion; verdächtig, exciting suspicion; ein steiniger Weg, a stony road; eine steinichte Birne, a stony pear; eine härene Decke, a hair blanket; eine haarige Decke, a hairy blanket; eine haarichte Decke, a blanket with hairs about it; höflich, polite; höfisch, cringing; herrlich, lordly; herrisch, rudely; jährig, one year old; jährlich, annual; geistig, mental, spirituous; geistlich, clerical, &c.

iz, ——— ——— itia, itum: Justiz.

feit, (aff.) used in the formation of abstract substs. from adjs. and advs. ending in bar, el, er, ig, lich and sam. It is synonymous with heit, which is joined to adjs. of different terminations, and with e as a termination of substs. made from adjs.; thus die Güte, goodness, is used for Gütigkeit, (see ig); Dankbarkeit, gratitude; Heiterkeit, cheerfulness.

lei, ley, (aff.) is derived from an old subst. implying sort or kind, and is joined to adjs. of number in the genit. fem. (see p. 20.) N. B. Instead of allerley, of all sorts, we also say allerhand.

lein, (aff.) of a diminutive kind, (see chen, el, and etchen), and is probably related to the English lean, thin, (small,) and to klein, little. It is generally in use in the south of Germany, and more commonly received in higher poetry and oratory than chen or el.

lich, (aff.) related to the English ly (like,) and generally of the same signification; i. e. the manner or likeness of a thing, though often translated by other terminations, as ous, able, &c. It is joined to adjs. and verbs, but most frequently to substs.: süßlich, sweetish; fälschlich, falsely; unerbittlich, inexorable (ably); künstlich, artificial; wörtlich, verbal; fürstlich, princely. Verbs in taking lich, sometimes throw away en: beßaglich, comfortable, from beßagen, to suit; sometimes they retain it, but take a t between the two syllables: wissentlich, knowingly, from wissen.

ling, (aff.) forming substs. masc. only, is related to lich, and in some words used instead of ing, signifies 1—a fitness to the thing expressed in the root: Däumling, thumb-stall; 2—a similarity to the thing with some idea of littleness: Dichterling, poetaster; 3—in composition with verbs, a person or thing related to a certain state or action: Findling, foundling; 4—with adjs. in the sense of nature or quality: Jüngling, youth; Neuling, novice; Zwilling, one of a pair of twins.

los, (adj. aff.) corresponding with the English less: leßlos, lifeless.

los, (pref. sep.) off: die Flinte geht los, the gun goes off; towards, in connection with auf: auf einen losgehen, to go towards a person.

mit, (pref. sep. and prep.) with, (con): mitgehen, to go with; Mitlebende, contemporaries; Mitbürger, fellow-citizen.

nach, (pref. sep.) after, in imitation of: nachgehen, to follow; nachschreiben, to imitate a writing. (See preps.)

nen, term. of many words in which the n often appears as a factitive or intensive sign: warnen, to warn, from wahren, to be careful; sehen, to look for, look intently, from sehen, to see.

ner, term. of substs. of agency, formed from verbs in nen, but also added to other nouns to express that an individual is connected with the thing: Falkner, falconer.

niß, (aff.) signifying thing; it is most frequently joined to verbs, either in the inf. (without en): Begräbniß, burial, from begraben; or in the past part: Geständniß, a confession, from gestanden. These substs., as the examples show, change their vowels, and present the abstract idea of an action, state or locality.

ob, (pref. inseparable) for über, above: Obdach, shelter

on, one, from Latin words in -onis: Action.

ot, from Latin words in -otis.

rich, (see ich): Gänserich, gander.

rei, (aff.) comp. of r and ei.

s, is discernible both as pref. and aff. without any distinct meaning. It is also used in the declensions, especially the gen. masc. and neut.; and forms advs. from subst. and adjs. (See decl. and advs.)

sal, (aff.) forming subst. generally from verbs, and indicates a thing of which the prefixed word affirms an action or state: Drangsal, oppression; Schicksal, fate.

sam, (aff.) used in the formation of adjs. from verbal subst. and from verbs. It bears an affinity to bar, yet generally differs from it, inasmuch as bar implies a passive possibility, and sam the intransitive idea of possibility and propensity: thus, furchtsam, timid; furchtbar, terrible; heilsam, wholesome; heilbar, curable. It corresponds with several of the English adjs. in some.

schaft, (aff.) probably from schaffen, to produce; and indicates 1—the condition of a thing: Freundschaft, friendship; 2—a union of persons: Gemeinschaft, community; Priesterschaft, priesthood.

sel, (aff.) related to sal; except that it implies a thing, while the latter generally signifies a person: Räthsels, riddle.

selig, (aff.) joined to adjs. and implying abundance, from the old subst. Sel, abundance, multitude: glücklich, happy; redselig, loquacious.

st. (See est.)

t. (See et.)

te, ten, tet, the terminations of the regular imperfect.

thum, (aff.) corresponding with the English termin. dom, and derived from the old northern domr, a thing of great importance. It implies the possession or dominion over a thing or dignity: Eigenthum, property; Herzogthum, dukedom. It particularly differs from schaft, inasmuch as the latter relates to the collection of persons in a rank or dignity: thus, Ritterschaft, chivalry, means all persons who are knights; Ritterthum, knight hood, the rank of knight.

um, (pref. sep. and inseparable and prep.) around: umhängen, to hang round; Umgebung, environs.

um, ium, iut, terminations of words derived from the Latin.

un, (pref. inseparable) a negation corresponding with the same syllable in English.

ung, (aff.) with very few exceptions formed from infins. to express the result of an action, and by which these kind of words differ from infins. used as subst. which express the action itself, and in English are generally rendered by the participle present. E. gr. Das Erziehen der Kinder ist nichts Leichtes, the education of children is no trifle; Seine Kinder haben eine gute Erziehung gehabt, his children have had a good education; das Hoffen, the hoping; die Hoffnung, the hope. Often, however, ung is joined to other words, and merely implies collection: die Stallung, the stable; die Kleidung, the clothing.

ur, (pref. sep.) of the same origin as er and of rare occurrence, as in Urbes wohner, aborigines; Urquell, fountain-head; Ursprung, origin; Urtheil, judgment, and thence urtheilen, to judge; Urwelt, antiquity.

ur, termin. from Latin words in ura.

uth, (aff.) of subst. designating, like ath, a condition: Armut, poverty.

ver, (pref. insep.) related to für and vor, generally designates the opposite of er, viz.: the turning away, or the destruction of things: verheeren, to desolate; verschwinden, to disappear; versprechen, to promise, i. e. giving away by speaking; in this sense it also marks the doing amiss: sich versprechen or verschreiben, to say or write amiss (one thing for another); in some instances ver like er designates the falling into a different state, and is in this sense generally prefixed to active verbs, whilst er stands before such as are neut.: verblenden, to blind. In some verbs it is merely intensive, as in ehren and verehren, to honor; in a few instances the meaning of this particle is obscure, and in others even contrary to its general acceptations, as in verschreiben, in the sense of ordering something by letter.

verab, veran, verun, (comp. pref.) in which ver is merely intensive.

vor, (pref. sep. and prep.) before, in presence of, (Lat. ante, præ, pro): vorstellen, to introduce, also to represent, (place before); it also implies an action done before persons, for their governance or imitation: verschreiben, to prescribe; Vorschrift, rule of conduct, also a copy to write from; einem vorspielen, vorlesen, to play on an instrument or read before another, either for his amusement or imitation; sometimes it means the front: Vormann, the front man in a military line.

zer, (pref. insep.) probably from zerren, to pull asunder, an intensive of ver in its first sense, viz. that of removing or destroying; e. gr. reißen, to tear; verreißen, intensive of reißen; zerreißen, to tear into pieces; or brechen, verbrechen, zerbrechen, to break, break into pieces, sever.

zig, (aff.) joined to numbers, in which, with the exception of eingig, only, it marks ten, like the English ty: vierzig, forty.

zu, (pref. insep.) Lat. ad, signifying to, adding to, directing to, and is related to an and bei; with this difference that the direction indicated by an refers more to the outside or surface of things, while be or bei imply only a juxta-position. Sometimes, however, the four particles seem to be absolutely synonymous, as in anbringen, beibringen, zubringen; although the usage of language has introduced some difference in the application of these words.
